Reagan prescribes strong medicine

Proposes spending freeze in 'State of the Union'

O'Neill and Baker applaud Reagan

By DONALD A. DAVIS
United Press International

WASHINGTON -- President Reagan, warning that budget deficits are "a clear and present danger" to the nation, proposed a freeze on a broad range of federal spending in his State of the Union message Tuesday.

The new austerity measures would include $55 billion in "savings" -- but no freeze -- at the Pentagon over five years, and "standby" income taxes and oil surcharges that would take effect in 1985 if deficits are still too high.

Addressing a joint session of Congress, Reagan called his plan to rescue the budget "strong medicine," and acknowledged it is more easily proposed than enacted. But he pronounced the proposal "realistic."

"We can't rely on hope alone," he said, calling for bipartisan cooperation to head off ballooning deficits that "could weaken and shorten the economic recovery now under way."

While acknowledging this is a "painful period" for the 12 million unemployed, Reagan insisted his economic recovery program is working. "America is on the mend," he said.

He said his proposed freeze "on a broad range of domestic spending programs" would mean no growth in the budget in real terms -- that is, discounting inflation. Without action, Reagan said, total federal spending will balloon by $1 trillion in the next five years.

With House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Vice President George Bush seated behind him on the dais, Reagan also promised he will offer jobs legislation, endorsed a school prayer constitutional amendment and new education aid programs, and asked for new powers to help American products compete in world markets.

Reagan, 71, whose rating in public opinion polls has been slipping as he passes the midpoint of his term, appeared to take note of the sag after saying, "We who are in government must take the lead in restoring the economy." The line, late in the address, was greeted by the first standing ovation he received.

Smiling broadly, Reagan quipped, "And here all this time I thought you were reading the papers." That drew another ovation, mostly from the Republican side of the aisle. In all, the 45-minute speech was interrupted 27 times by applause of varying length -- the longest reserved for expressions of concern about the poor and needy and declarations he will keep America strong.

Reagan, wearing a neatly tailored deep blue suit and rich red tie, used teleprompters when pres-

Congress applauds president's 'conciliatory' tone

WASHINGTON -- President Reagan's apparently "conciliatory" approach to Congress was welcomed by members of both parties Tuesday night, although some said he offered little change in policy.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Reagan's statement that "we in government must take the lead in restoring the economy" was "a historic political reversal."

"Two years ago, before the current recession had even begun, President Reagan said that 'government is not the solution to our problem. Government is the problem,'" O'Neill recalled.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., said Reagan's speech signaled he is "ready to compromise with the Congress in an effort to speed the economic recovery of the nation."

"The president knows how bad it is out there,"

said Vander Jagt, national Republican Congressional Committee chairman.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., welcomed Reagan's call for "a bipartisan approach in mending the economic conditions that have rent the nation. Surely, that is what we need and that is the course that we ought to pursue."

Rep. Frank Guarini, D-N.J., called it "good news ... that the president is conciliatory, and has expressed his willingness to work with Congress." But, he said, "The bad news is that the president has given us no immediate program to adequately reduce his deficit."

Guarini said the spending freeze, "while intriguing, needs to be spelled out," and that Reagan was "merely hedging his bet" with the standby tax program.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was less impressed with the speech. "As usual, the president spoke well, but missed the point."

"Unemployment is our number one challenge and yet only two short paragraphs in 11 lengthy pages were devoted to the tragedy which affects more than 12 million families today."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a presidential hopeful, criticized Reagan's proposal for a standby tax increase. "If the house is still burning in 1986 he says we'll call the fire department," Hollings said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Reagan proposed "tightening the belt of men and women whose belt has already been tightened."

"It seems the Democrats do have to offer alternatives," including "cutting back on the military buildup," Kennedy said.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., also a presidential hopeful, said Reagan "may have proposed some new initiatives to ease some of the pain, but he has a long way to go before the economic proposals he makes will undo the mess his earlier ones create."

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., said the speech was

GOP legislators may cut salaries

By MARK SHENFFELT
United Press International

BOISE -- Senate Republicans are researching the possibility of cutting state employees' salaries by 10 percent for the remainder of fiscal year 1983, a legislative leader said Tuesday.

In the House, meantime, a Republican Caucus spokesman said the majority appeared to be "abruptly" moving away from a $50 million plan to mortgage state buildings because of public dissatisfaction with the proposal.

The pay reduction, which would be part of a program to eliminate a projected $90.2 million revenue shortfall before June 30, would save the state several million dollars, said Senate Majority Leader Mark Ricks, R-Rexburg.

Ricks said the idea surfaced Monday night during a closed-door caucus in which GOP senators refined various budget-balancing options that have been floating through the Statehouse's upper floors for several weeks.

"We're just looking into it right now," Ricks said.

The Republican floor leader said, though, he thought a 10 percent pay cut "would have tough sledding" in gaining approval from the full Legislature.

House GOP Caucus Chairman Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said although no formal vote was taken on the building-mortgage issue Tuesday, it seemed Republicans in the lower chamber were suddenly shying away from the plan -- until now the chief budget-balancing proposal from the House Republican leadership.

Bateman said House Republicans were now leaning more toward a Senate GOP budget-balancing package.

Ricks said the 21 Republican senators had reached a tentative consensus for a plan to wipe out some $33.8 of the shortfall through additional budget cuts, accelerated tax collections and funding transfers.

The remaining $55.4 million could be made up by triggering a property tax deficiency levy and offsetting the subsequent loss in school funds with proceeds of a sale of tax-anticipation notes after the fiscal year ends, he said.

Bateman said House Republicans voted on several budget-cutting alternatives Tuesday, but he declined to reveal the results until the whole list was considered -- possibly by Wednesday.

Jerome businessman jailed on rape charge

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME -- A 37-year-old Jerome businessman was arrested Tuesday afternoon and charged with raping a 27-year-old Jerome woman at her home last March.

The arrest capped a 10-month investigation by the Jerome County sheriff's office.

By day's end, the suspect, Dan Lee Featherston, of 704 B Ave. E., had been arraigned -- in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome -- on six felony charges. The charges are: rape, infamous crime against nature, robbery, first-degree burglary, aggravated battery and aggravated assault.

Featherston later was freed on a $25,000 property bond, set by Judge Roger Burdick.

The bond was posted by the defendant's parents, Richard and Mary Featherston of Twin Falls, according to a sheriff's deputy.

If convicted, Featherston could face a sentence of life in prison, which is the maximum penalty for both rape and robbery.

Featherston has requested a preliminary hearing into the charges, Featherston's lawyer, Eugene Fredericksen, declined comment Tuesday evening.

Sheriff's deputies, who announced the arrest at a 5 p.m. press conference, said the assailant forced open a door to the victim's home. Sheriff Fiza Hall said the victim was treated following the rape at St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome and released. Her name has not been released by authorities.

Salvador rebels widen attack

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Guerrillas staged attacks Tuesday in seven of El Salvador's 14 provinces, witnesses said, and vowed to siphon a "quota of blood" from troops advancing on leftists in the northeast pine forests of Morazan.

Guerrillas plined down nearly 6,000 government troops in Morazan, overran four towns in northern Chalatenango province and opened a third front in the province of Usulután to the southeast, military officers said.

Government forces are fighting for control of a strategic crossing of the Torola river just south of Meanguera, about 75 miles northeast of San Salvador, military officials in Morazan province said.

Star gazing satellite launched

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — A satellite telescope that scientists say will open up nearly the entire universe to mapping and greatly expand man's capability to fathom space was launched Tuesday.

Officials at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of Pasadena, Calif., the project manager, said the satellite was catapulted aloft by a Delta rocket toward a polar orbit circling the earth every 103 minutes.

A joint mission of the United States, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom, the Infrared Astronomical Satellite is designed to search distant stars and galaxies from the heat they give off.

When it reaches polar orbit 560 miles above the earth, scientists say, it will be far beyond infrared-absorbing molecules of water vapor and carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and will be able to detect heat sources far more distant than ever before.

NBC reports plot on Walesa

NEW YORK (UPI) — The man who shot and wounded Pope John Paul II and a Bulgarian charged as his accomplice had discussed a plot to assassinate Polish labor leader Lech Walesa, NBC news said Tuesday.

"But for whatever reason the attempt never took place," Marvin Kalb, NBC diplomatic correspondent, said.

Kalb, in a report from Rome, said Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish terrorist who shot the pope, and Sergel Ivanov Antonov, who was head of the Bulgarian Airline office in Rome, discussed plans to kill Walesa in a meeting at the Hotel Arminde.

Walesa visited the Vatican for six days in January 1981 — four months after the August 1980 uprising and strikes in Gdansk, Poland, that gave birth to the Independent Solidarity trade union.

Antonov has been charged with active complicity in the May 13, 1981, attempt on the pope's life.

World braces for oil price war

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

An international oil price war loomed Tuesday as spot crude prices tumbled on European markets in the aftermath of the OPEC deadlock over pricing and production.

Non-OPEC Norway and Britain brooded for a possible cut in North Sea oil prices that are pegged to the cartel's best-quality crude. The British pound sunk to an all-time low against the dollar.

Saudi Arabian oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani predicted North Sea prices would soon drop by $2 to $3 a barrel in the absence of an accord in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and set the stage for a pricing free-for-all.

"Everyone is now waiting to see who will break first," said a spokesman for Norway's state oil company Statoil.

British Energy Secretary Nigel Lawson said in a BBC radio interview in London that the Britain would not take the lead in cutting prices.

OPEC's summit in Geneva collapsed Monday after its 13 member nations failed to agree on a production plan to keep its $34-a barrel oil price from cracking in the glutted world oil market.

The OPEC stalemate raised fears that a pricing battle could trigger loan defaults in oil-exporting nations and endanger the international financial system.

But British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said: "I believe in general that a fall in the price of oil — although the speed of change causes difficulty — is beneficial to world economies as a whole."

On the Rotterdam spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, North Sea oil prices skidded by more than $3 to $29.50 a barrel, traders said. North Sea oil is officially priced at $33.50 a barrel.

The spot market is an accurate barometer of future price trends.

enting his remarks. Observers noted, however, his delivery was not as smooth as last year and he stumbled several times.

The president, who has suffered several struggles with the Democratic-controlled House, stressed the need for cooperation between Capitol Hill and the White House in meeting the nation's needs.

Democrats, who sharply increased their hold on the House in midterm elections, are certain to fight further cuts in social programs this year. Republicans will not be happy with Reagan's proposal for contingency taxhikes.

"Let us in these next two years — men and women of both parties and all political shades — concentrate on the long-range, bipartisan responsibilities of government, not the short-term temptations of partisan politics," he said.

He singled out O'Neill and Senate GOP leader Howard Baker for praise for their support for the Social Security reform package, and lauded other members of Congress who worked on the commission. He called the panel's work an example of how to address the nation's other pressing problems, and urged passage of the bill-out plan by Easter.

O'Neill quickly took note of Reagan's comment that government must take the lead in solving the nation's economic problems, labeling it a significant change in attitude, and promised to work with the president to spur recovery.

Reaction

disappointing, although there were signs of a more conciliatory approach.

"There is no question the Republicans are in trouble and they sense that," he said. "And now we see some references to minority rights. If he means it, let him support the Equal Rights Amendment."

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said the defense budget "is going to have to be cut more than the amount the president recommended tonight."

And Quayle said he expects Reagan will have to accept public works jobs bill. "I can't believe that if Congress passes one by a strong vote, he would veto it. In fact I would recommend overriding a veto."

Freshman Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., called the speech "very wise and humane," and said "the president is obviously concerned about jobs."

In their formal televised response to the president's speech, the Democrats dismissed Reagan's economic program as a "gamble that failed," and outlined their own program for long-range economic recovery, a strong defense, nuclear arms reduction and energy independence.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Reagan's plan contains ideas "which many Americans would oppose on an item-by-item basis. But we must send the federal deficits sharply down, and we will not be able to sustain a strong economic recovery without summing the political courage which the president has asked for."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said Reagan did not say enough about jobs — "it was incomplete."

Sen. Bob Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said America "may be on the mend but we've got a long way to go."

"It was a good speech... conciliatory in the sense he cited Social Security as an area where we had made compromise. It's important we do more of that this year," Dole said.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said he was "really quite pleased" to see Reagan address the problems of equity for women, educational deficiencies, a catastrophic illness program — "a number of these things that represent real people-needs in this country."

House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois and GOP whip Trent Lott of Mississippi agreed the speech represented a fundamental change in Reagan's course, and expressed relief that he did not take a hard line.

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas said he was glad the president had not repeated "that old, moth-eaten shibboleth that government is the problem."

Arrest

Hall also declined to comment on an indication that a weapon was involved in the crime, since the charge of aggravated assault implies the use of a weapon.

The arrest came one week after deputies had revealed that a rape case had been reported in the past two years. Those cases — as well as a report of an attempted rape in the Wendell area — had sparked a flurry of rumors in Gooding and Jerome counties.

But the arrest did not produce any confirmation to speculation that the three cases were linked.

A separate, fourth rape is under investigation by the Jerome Police Department, but sources had indicated previously that it is not linked to the other cases.

Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja continued to decline comment Tuesday on that topic, as did Jerome County officials, who said only that Featherston's arrest stemmed from the March 21 rape.

Asked to comment on statements that a joint investigation between Jerome and Gooding counties was under way, Jerome County Sheriff's Deputy Larry Webb said only that the case is "open" to other law-enforcement departments.

Hall said no single turn of events intensified the 10-month investigation. He also praised Webb, the department's chief investigator, for mounting an around-the-clock investigation during the past four weeks.

Jerome County Prosecutor Dennis Adamson said that he was "most pleased with the way the county has handled the investigation. They have done a good job."

The compliments followed last week's criticism of Hall and his department for not disclosing reports of the rapes. Last week, the department had confirmed that an investigation was under way.

Hall said his office would continue to welcome any additional information that anyone in the community might have to offer.

Vocational education faces cuts in program

BOISE (UPI) — A rapidly changing job market has increased demands on the state's vocational education system, but about five programs will be eliminated next year if legislators do not provide more than just an inflationary increase, agency administrator Larry Selland said.

Selland told a budget committee the state Board of Education's request for $17.7 million for fiscal year 1984 will not be sufficient to deal with an increasing demand for vocational training.

Technological changes on the job mean "the work force of the future promises to be quite different," Selland told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee. "Our system is going to have to respond."

But Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, suggested Selland seek more money from businesses and industries that profit from a trained work force.

"I don't see how we could get to that increased level" of spending, Knigge said. "Industry, no doubt, will have to come up with additional funds."

Selland said businesses already contribute an uncalculated amount of money through donations of equipment and by volunteering advice on how the state's vocational programs should be operated.

But he said 80 percent of Idaho employment is provided by small businesses that do not have the resources to contribute large amounts of funds or time to vocational education.

Selland said he asked the state Board of Education to seek a $21 million budget for fiscal 1984, which begins in July, but that was whittled down to an amount that does not fully cover all the programs.

Workers dig through the rubble of the IRECO plant near Lehi, Utah

Blast levels chemical plant

By PAUL ROLLY
United Press International

LEHI, Utah — A violent blast at an explosives manufacturing plant Tuesday killed two workers, leveled a storage building and shook homes as far as 20 miles away from the isolated complex near Utah Lake.

The 12:30 p.m. explosion at the IRECO Chemical Plant caused extensive damage to the surrounding complex, and killed four employees believed working in the storage building.

The victims were identified as Mark Ward, Ray Lunt and Gean Beall, all of American Fork, and Stacy Smith of Orem. All four men were reportedly in their 20s.

The cause of the blast was not immediately determined, but federal investigators called it an accident.

A fifth IRECO employee was treated for shock after the explosion.

Witnesses said the explosion spewed debris for hundreds of yards and left a deep crater where the two-story building stood.

James Parcett, a state boiler inspector, said he was checking one of the adjacent buildings at the complex when the massive explosion "knocked me off my feet."

"I went outside and saw that one building was leveled and there was extensive damage to the surrounding area," he said. Parcett said he was protected from the blast just 50 yards away because he was inside a metal building at the time.

Rescue workers found the body of one man blown about 35 feet from the building, Utah County Sheriff's Lt. Gary Clayton said. He said he didn't think the other three bodies ever would be found.

Utah County Sheriff Mack Holley said federal, state and county investigators had blocked off the immediate vicinity because of fears there were still undetonated explosives nearby.

Holley requested the services of a special federal investigative team from the Division of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco to inspect the area and determine the cause.

Nick Dereta, agent in charge of ATF's Salt Lake City office, said 17 experts from all over the West began arriving Tuesday afternoon.

Initial reports indicated there were 1,500 pounds of explosives in liquid state in the building, but Dereta said there could have been up to 3,000 pounds.

Holley said it was the second fatal blast at the IRECO plant. He said 15 years ago two men were killed when the company was testing underwater explosives.

IRECO makes ammonium nitrate explosives for mining firms and it regularly tests the products at its plant site. The firm employs about 250, according to state OSHA official Ronald Joseph.

An explosion similar to Tuesday's blast occurred at the Mining Services International Plant west of Grantsville, Utah, on July 30, 1981. That firm also manufactured explosives for mining companies.

Chatburn bill would kill pay increases

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — State legislators will receive no pay increase this year if a lawmaker from Albion has his way.

Rep. Vard Chatburn, a Republican, introduced legislation Tuesday that would freeze legislators' wages at the same level as last session — $8,400, plus living expenses.

The plan received a unanimous vote to introduce it in the House State Affairs Committee — the same committee that still holds another wage plan, offered by Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls.

In a similar action, the committee entertained a proposal to freeze the salaries of state employees and put a one-year moratorium on the hiring of new employees and the constructing of new state buildings. That plan, offered by Rep. Mike Strasser, R-Nampa, was determined to have technical flaws, however, and will be redrafted.

"Unless the College of Southern Idaho hires a new president really quick, they will have to do without one for at least a year under this proposal," Chatburn said of Strasser's plan.

That's because Strasser's measure would provide for maintaining only state positions that are filled as of Feb. 1. All other jobs would have to remain vacant.

College officials just are beginning their search for a permanent replacement for CSI President James Taylor, who died last year.

House Majority Leader Jack Kennebeck, R-Boise, also criticized Strasser's plan for its proposed freeze on new buildings.

"What would happen if a building turned down?" he questioned. "We undoubtedly would have insurance money to rebuild it, but if this bill were to become law, it probably would prevent us from replacing that building."

It also was noted that Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, is chairing a special committee to study state employees' salaries and that introducing a separate wage bill might be premature.

Despite the attacks by Chatburn and Kennebeck, none of the committee members voiced opposition to the intent of Strasser's bill — freezing hiring and new expenses.

"But there are technical flaws here that will cause serious problems," said Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Boise. "I certainly support the concept of putting a freeze on new hiring, but it should be written so as to avoid some of these other complications."

To that end, Strasser moved for the bill to be withdrawn from committee so he could rewrite it.

Meanwhile, Chatburn's plan for freezing legislators' salaries garnered strong support in the State Affairs Committee.

"But time is of the essence, because the curtain comes down on us on the 3rd of February," Chatburn warned.

Unless the legislators take specific action on their salaries, a recommendation by the Citizens' Compensation Commission for significantly increased salaries will go into effect automatically.

"By keeping our compensation at the level of the 56th Legislature (the last two years), we'll save the state about $70,000," Chatburn said.

The plan proposed by Brackett calls for a 10-percent reduction in salary, but it accepts the cost-of-living increase recommended by the compensation committee for legislators' housing and transportation expenses.

Brackett's bill has been tabled in the State Affairs Committee because of an alleged technical flaw that could result in no pay being authorized for legislators.

Little tries to shelve lottery

BOISE (UPI) — House State Affairs Committee Chairman Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, is attempting to shelve a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow a state lottery in Idaho.

The resolution was transferred to Little's committee at the order of House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, after it was introduced last week in the House Business Committee.

Little said Monday he wants to sit on the measure until 1984 to give more time for public comment on the issue.

The resolution's sponsor, Business Committee Chairman James Golder, R-Boise, said he was upset by Little's move. He said lawmakers should face the issue this year — especially since the Legislature has received a record number of calls since the issue surfaced in the House about two weeks ago.

Golder said he may attempt procedural maneuvers later in the session in an attempt to pull the bill out of Little's committee for a vote on the House floor.

Lebanon wants more troops

United Press International

Lebanon wants U.S. special envoy Philip Habib to return from Washington with promises of Marine reinforcements for Lebanon and American crews to man early warning stations demanded by Israel, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The sources, quoted by the Central News Agency, said Lebanon also wants Washington to oppose partial withdrawals of Syrian and Israeli troops and come out in support of a full withdrawal of Israel's 30,000-man invasion force that leaves Lebanese sovereignty intact.

The report of the Central News

Agency, well-informed on government affairs, confirmed Lebanon is willing to accept Israel's demand for spy stations in south Lebanon, but not under Israeli control.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Chief of Staff I. G. Raphael Eitan reiterated that Israel wants the stations manned by Israelis "for an agreed period of time in order to make sure and watch that the security arrangements are being adhered to."

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon moved to defuse mounting tension between U.S. and Israeli troops in Lebanon by ordering his occupational force not to cross Marine lines near Beirut "even in pursuit" of Palestinian guerrillas.

Sharon's order was issued to "prevent as much as possible friction between our troops and the American Marines" in the Beirut area, Israel Radio reported.

"There has been no change in the deployment of the Israel Defense Forces," a military source said. "The defense minister reinforced the order that we should not cross (Marine lines) even in pursuit."

Israel has charged that Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas have repeatedly escaped through the Marine lines after ambushing Israeli patrols.

Japan protests Soviet statement

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government accused Moscow Tuesday of waging a campaign to create mass anxiety in Japan and protested Soviet threats to deploy more missiles aimed at Asia.

"We have to regard the Soviet mass media criticism as being aimed at increasing the Japanese people's anxiety and fear of a possible Soviet nuclear attack," said Deputy Foreign Minister Bunjiro Nakajima. In a verbal protest to Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Pavlov.

"Therefore, the Japanese government protests the series of recent Soviet remarks and acts," Nakajima said.

Nakajima's statements were quoted by Shiro Amaya, a foreign ministry spokesman, who said the foreign minister summoned the Soviet ambassador and spoke with him for more than an hour.

Nakajima denounced Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's statements in Bonn, West Germany, last week that unless the United States scrapped its plan to deploy new nuclear missiles in Western Europe, Moscow would move some of its missiles to the Asian front.

Nakajima also protested a Soviet buildup of conventional military forces in Asia, including four islands off Japan occupied by the Soviets but claimed by Japan, Amaya said.

Following the protest, Nakasone reaffirmed his pro-U.S. stand at a symposium in Tokyo.

"My remarks in the United States last week stemmed from my belief that Japan should share a common destiny with the United States," said the 64-year-old leader, who took office in November.

The official Soviet news agency Tass criticized Nakasone's comments, published last week in The Washington Post, saying Japan should become "an unsinkable aircraft carrier" to resist a possible Soviet attack.

China spares Mao's widow

PEKING (UPI) — China Tuesday spared the life of Mao Tse-tung's widow Jiang Qing, commuting the death sentence of the unrepentant leader of the Gang of Four to life imprisonment for crimes committed during the Cultural Revolution.

The decision not to execute Jiang, 69, was actually taken by the top leadership some time ago but was not officially announced until the day that a two-year suspension of her death sentence expired.

Also spared was Zhang Chunqiao, 65, Madame Mao's chief associate, who also was sentenced to death Jan. 25, 1981 at the close of the most spectacular trial in modern Chinese history.

Church's role subtle in censorship

By JOHN ALOYSIUS FARRELL
Denver Post Staff writer

BOUNTIFUL, Utah — The Mormon pioneers named this town after the land in their holy scriptures where Christ appeared in the New World to spread His gospel of charity and love. Now, they ban books here — and sack librarians who object to the censorship.

It all began on an autumn night in 1977, when a Bountiful mother found a novel that her son had checked out of the Davis County Library.

The title of the book, written by a non-Mormon, was "Americana." It is the saga of a burned-out television executive who tours the nation in the turbulent 1960s and hits rock bottom during an explicit sexual encounter marred by vomiting, urination and violence.

The mother thought the book was filthy and gave it to a Bountiful city councilman... who found the book pornographic and gave it to the Bountiful city attorney... who believed the book was obscene and forwarded it to Jeanne Layton, the director of the Davis County libraries.

For Layton, it was the first flash of lightning in a five-year storm that continues even now in federal district court.

The librarian's defense of "Americana" would get her fired from her job, forced into court to win reinstatement, and slurred in the county and state where she was born and had lived all her life.

On first glance, there is no evidence that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — the state's predominant religion and most influential interest group — had anything to do with the way Jeanne Layton lost her job.

But in towns like Bountiful and locales like Davis County, it is not unusual for militant citizen groups to take fundamental Mormon doctrine to heart on issues like pornography and abortion — and manifest their faith by launching crusades against institutions like cable television, the public libraries and Planned Parenthood.

It is not too far a jump, say civil libertarians, to link holy wars against Home Box Office with the Mormon Prophet Spencer Kimball's exhortation that his congregation should: "As citizens, join in the fight against obscenity in your community."

"Do not be lulled into inaction by the pornographic profane. Do not let them masquerade licentiousness as liberty," Kimball told the Latter-day Saints at the October 1976 general conference.

Says Shirley Pedler, a native of Utah who was raised a Mormon and now serves as executive director for the American Civil Liberties Union in the state: "The bulk of the resistance to things like cable television derives from the atmosphere created by the church."

Adds Karen Shepherd, a native Utah and non-Mormon editor of Network, a newspaper for working women: "It's kind of a fundamentalist religion. They are still into book burning and guarding the libraries. I don't know if that will go away."

When the complaint about "Americana" first crossed Jeanne Layton's desk, she dutifully followed Davis County law and convened a jury of professional librarians to determine whether the novel was obscene.

The board of librarians ruled that the book was not "solely" sensational or erotic — just four of its 338 pages were dominated by sexual detail — and indeed had merit.

"Americana" went back on the shelves and the whole matter would have been forgotten, except for Morris Swapp. Swapp, a Mormon, was a former elementary school principal who served as the mayor of Bountiful before being elected as a Davis County legislator. Swapp was never one to pass up the opportunity to exploit a "moral" issue for political gain among the Mormon electorate.

"When Swapp was mayor, he took two political hot potatoes — Planned Parenthood and a local fight over obscene literature — watched them carefully as the issues heated to a boiling point and served them au gratin to a constituency that at the time seemed eager for this sort of diet," wrote reporters Lynn Telford and Louise Kingsbury at the time of the controversy, in Utah Holiday magazine.

As a commissioner, Swapp had himself appointed to the Davis County Library Board, and in just his second meeting declared that "Americana" was nothing but rot and filth, and demanded that it be removed from the shelves.

"If that filth was in a magazine in any store throughout our county, it would be pulled from the shelf or we'd get them for pornography," Swapp said.

The commissioner had the support of two other members of the Davis County Library Board. One board member was a political ally of Swapp's — the other was the local representative of a "watchdog" citizen group, the Citizens for True Freedom.

The Citizens for True Freedom fight to keep sex education out of the schools, the magazines Penthouse and Playboy out of convenience stores. R-rated cable television shows out of the home, adult book stores out of town. Planned Parenthood clinics out of state and immoral books out of the library.

Layton again submitted the book to a jury of her peers. Again it was ruled worthy. This was in April 1979. Three months later, Swapp demanded that Jeanne Layton resign. In September of that year, she was fired.

Copies of "Americana" stayed on the shelves of the other county libraries while Jeanne Layton fought the board's decision. First with the county merit system council, then in federal court, again at the merit council and finally before a county judge. A crowd of the librarian's supporters held a protest rally on the courthouse steps.

Swapp responded by labeling his opponents — who by this time included the Utah League of Women Voters, members of the state ACLU, the Utah Library Association, the director of the Bountiful area Chamber of Commerce, the Salt Lake Tribune, and some prominent local clergymen — as "radicals" and "subversives."

A counter-demonstration was held by those who endorsed Swapp's actions, and a whispering campaign swept the county — forcing Layton to deny in the press the charges that she was an atheist and a lesbian.

By this time, "Americana" had received such publicity that there were seven requests for the book on the Bountiful library waiting list. And bookstores in Salt Lake City couldn't keep the novel in stock.

On Jan. 10, 1980 — more than two years after the first complaint was filed about "Americana" — Layton was finally reinstated by the Davis County Merit Council, which ruled that she had been dismissed without sufficient cause.

But in April 1980, the board members adopted a new selection process that took the power to judge a book away from a jury of professional librarians, and gave it instead to a five-member committee of two librarians and three citizens appointed by the board.

"Americana" was banned from the shelves of Davis County libraries. It is forbidden there today.

To reach the town of Bountiful, you drive north from Salt Lake City along a narrow strip of land between the Wasatch Range and the brackish marshes of the Great Salt Lake.

"The county is very conservative," says Layton. "It has the kind of climate and culture and lifestyle that attracts conservative people."

Mehlele Wood, the executive director of the Planned Parenthood Association of Utah, has a harsher opinion of Davis County residents. When Planned Parenthood tried to open a clinic in Bountiful in the early 1970s, the organization was driven out of town by Morris Swapp and an angry citizenry.

"We never got opened. They got us on a zoning regulation," says Wood.

tion must be had at that hazard," he added.

The incident may seem a bit dated except that in salty, proper, Mormon Utah, President Clark's words are still being quoted in an occasional church marriage manual.

And in updating the church's attitude toward sex, it is easy to see that the Mormons haven't changed much since J. Reuben Clark filled the tabernacle with his anger.

In a recent issue of Sunstone magazine, Mormon sociologist Harold T. Christensen wrote that "Mormons are disproportionately high on the chastity norm... While premarital sex now characterizes a 'new majority' within American culture generally, the Mormon subculture continues to stand out as a striking exception."

Librarian Jeanne Layton was fired when she refused to remove a book

"It's a town of real crazies. They railroaded us out of town."

Layton insists that Bountiful and Davis County do not deserve their reputations as seats of right-wing extremism. "We've been tainted by the media," she says. "There are liberals here. They are a minority. And they aren't organized. But they are here."

Yet somehow Davis County just can't keep itself out of the news. This is the place:

• Where the host of a radio talk show on Bountiful's KCGI-FM solicited money for Fates' defense.

• Where Republican U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, darling of the New Right, kicked off his re-election campaign; and KCGI became the state's only radio station to accept a political advertisement depicting Hatch's devout, non-drinking Mormon opponent as an ultra-liberal who dined at cocktail parties.

• Where Lloyd Sellnet was elected to the state Legislature on the wings of a recall movement backed by the John Birch Society — and made a career fighting against abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, control of firearms, and "pornography." He was the author of a law enacted by the Utah Legislature to prohibit "indecent" material on cable television.

• And where Morris Swapp persuaded the local town council to enact legislation that gives the area one of the toughest local obscenity ordinances in the state — setting the stage for his showdown with librarian Jeanne Layton.

It is a town of 28,000 — a bedroom community of quiet, tree-lined streets filled with happy Mormon families and tidy Mormon wards.

A lot of people moved out here because they think it is a good place to raise children," says Layton. "People have large families here. They come for safe schools. There are about 150,000 people in the county and 40,000 of them are between kindergarten and high school."

Until the Defense Department started beefing up Hill Air Force base on the county's northern bounds — so that the air base has become Utah's single largest employer — Davis County was solidly Mormon.

Even now, 70 percent of the population belongs to the Latter-day Saint Church. And due to the transient nature of Air Force life, the stable Mormon establishment has no trouble maintaining control of the county's levers of power.

Is there a connection between Davis County's overwhelmingly Mormon population and its willingness to embrace right-wing causes?

Some in Utah think there is. The Mormon Church, for the past two decades, has vehemently attacked such "enemies of the family" as pornography, abortion, birth control and the ERA.

In 1972, for example, the Morillon First Presidency warned the Saints that, "We are deeply concerned about this growing obscenity in print, record and tape, on television and in motion pictures."

"We encourage Latter-day Saints as citizens," the leaders said, "to exert every effort to fight the innards

Mormon youth maintain conservative sexual attitudes

By JOHN ALOYSIUS FARRELL
Denver Post Staff writer

The crowd at the Mormon conference in October 1979 was respectfully silent when J. Reuben Clark Jr. spoke to the pulpit.

"The cry is raised that the church needs a book on sex. But what should such a book tell? Already the schools have taught sex facts and nausea."

"All their teachings have but turn away the modesty that once clothed sex; their discussions sometimes seem to make sex animals out of our boys and girls," Clark said.

A word on chastity can be given in one sentence, two words: Be chaste. That is all. Remember the prime purpose of sex desire is to beget children. Sex gratification must be had at that hazard," he added.

The incident may seem a bit dated except that in salty, proper, Mormon Utah, President Clark's words are still being quoted in an occasional church marriage manual.

And in updating the church's attitude toward sex, it is easy to see that the Mormons haven't changed much since J. Reuben Clark filled the tabernacle with his anger.

In a recent issue of Sunstone magazine, Mormon sociologist Harold T. Christensen wrote that "Mormons are disproportionately high on the chastity norm... While premarital sex now characterizes a 'new majority' within American culture generally, the Mormon subculture continues to stand out as a striking exception."

While 80 percent of the Mormon men and 92 percent of the Mormon women disapproved of premarital sex, the non-Mormon figures were 20 percent for gentle men and 25 percent for gentle women.

Seventy-three percent of those Mormons polled at the "Intermountain" college were still virgins, while only 23 percent of the non-Mormons at that same school had not lost their virginity.

In fact, some of Christensen's data seemed to indicate that young Mormons' attitudes are getting even more conservative with time.

"The chief explanation seems to be that from infancy on Mormons are socialized into viewing unchastity as a sin and chastity as one of the highest of virtues," Christensen wrote.

"We are very, very extreme on morality."

says the Mormon prophet, Spencer Kimball, who has spoken out often in the past against pornography, sex education, homosexuality, abortion, birth control and "veneration of the orgasm."

A guide used by Mormon mission presidents and bishops, for example, urges young men and women who feel the need to masturbate to wear confining clothes at night "so that it would be difficult and time-consuming to remove them. In very severe cases it may be necessary to tie a hand to the bed frame."

Small wonder that Playboy magazine rated the church-owned Brigham Young University dead last in a poll of sexual action on college campuses — with the "holiest hangout" listed as "any plane leaving Provo."

The problems start when young Mormons reach their late teens and begin to hit the marrying age in Utah. After a childhood of repressing their sexual feelings the sudden freedom can lead them to pre-marital pre-arrangements.

Seven out of every 10 babies born to teenage girls in Utah are conceived out of wedlock, according to the state Division of Health. And half of all Utah births involve teenage mothers.

Christensen's study also showed that Mormons are more likely to feel guilty about sex than the non-Mormons he polled. And even if Mormon youths remain chaste until after marriage they may find it hard to rid themselves of lingering guilt, and difficult sexual feelings for wife or husband may be inhibited — putting a strain on their marriage.

Inside the Church State of pornography in their communities.

Quite commonly, individual Mormons hear the hierarchy making statements such as these, and interpret them as marching orders for crusades like the effort to ban "American."

Says Rod Decker, a reporter for Salt Lake City's NBC television affiliate, and one of the state's most knowledgeable political analysts: "Mormons not only follow their leaders, but watch them carefully to see how they might be leading."

The Mormon leaders don't have to take an active role in a local issue like the opening of a Planned Parenthood clinic. The rank-and-file saints will join the fray on their own.

Steve Holbrook served three terms in the Utah House of Representatives. Born a Mormon — though now inactive in his church — Holbrook worked with legislators like Sellenet in the Statehouse, and as a liberal Democrat opposed many New Right causes.

"What happens is the average Mormon thinks that if someone that important has that view, then we can't go too far wrong by adopting that position," Holbrook says.

Such devotion to their leaders makes the Mormons an easy group for ambitious politicians to manipulate.

"You will get a statement from a president of the church on abortion," says Holbrook. "That is not as extreme as the Right-to-Life position."

But the Mormons are like everybody else, sometimes they don't look past the headlines, and you get all these New Right political people who tack on a more strident view of what was said to look churchy and hook a ride on the Mormons.

"They promote their view as if it was the Mormon Church position. I never say anything in the State Legislature from the church on Planned Parenthood, but I saw it from the right-wing radical Republicans, who claimed they were just following the teaching of the church."

A vivid example of this kind of manipulation occurred in Utah last month — and again it was residents of Bountiful who stood at the center of the flap.

Sunday, Oct. 3, 1982, beneath the humpbacked roof of the famed Salt Lake City Tabernacle, the most powerful man in the Mormon Church is about to bring the 152nd General Conference of the Latter-day Saints to a close.

For two days, the aged Mormon patriarchs have urged their flock to avoid the evils of this world: vulgarity, stealing, lying, cheating, blasphemy, drunkenness, fornication, adultery, homosexuality, abortion and "all other abuses of the sacred power to create."

Now Gordon Hinckley, the healthiest, most active and influential member of the Mormon First Presidency, is ready to sum up the important lessons of the semiannual event.

But then Hinckley departs from his summation and gives a special warning to the members of his church: "Pornography is a growing, vile and evil thing," he says. "It is on motion picture screens, and comes into the homes of people on television. We see it on newsstands. It reaches out to entrap, beguile and destroy those who are enticed to partake of it."

And then, with a final hymn from the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, the conference is over.

To an outsider, Hinckley's remarks seem routine and innocuous. But in the first week of October 1982, such condemnations had taken on a special significance. For three years, the citizens of Utah have been confronted with a new invasion of their Rocky Mountain kingdom — cable television.

Citing such warnings by the church, and righteously deploring the nudity and sex in R-rated movies like "Dressed to Kill," "Freaky Friday," "Heavenly Creatures" who attacks "women with a straight razor" and "Private Lessons" (in which a millionaire hires a beautiful woman to sexually initiate his 15-year-old son) a number of New Right politicians have pushed legislation, and in the process their own careers, to censor cable television.

And so Hinckley had spoken in a charged political atmosphere.

Within 24 hours, the organizer of a petition drive that seeks to ban "indecent material" from cable television told the press he had received the blessing of the Mormon Church.

President Hinckley, in his concluding remarks at the conference, warned of the dangers of tolerance toward pornographic material and the way in which that material can enter into the home. John L. Harmer, an attorney from Bountiful, told the state's biggest newspaper, the Salt Lake Tribune, the speech was "an endorsement of the purpose behind the initiative," Harmer said.

And significantly, within a month the Utah public opinion polls showed a sharp increase in the level of support for censorship — so that now more than 70 percent of the population favors some sort of regulations on cable TV programming.

Harmer, who served as lieutenant governor of California while Ronald Reagan was governor, had spelled out his cause at a late summer meeting of the Freeman Institute, a right-wing group with headquarters in an industrial park just outside of Salt Lake City.

Amid frequent applause, as the son of a Mormon apostle watched approvingly from the dais, Harmer told the crowd that those who defended the cable companies' First Amendment rights were merely using Nazi tactics of propaganda to give pornographers "unrestrained hedonistic license."

Citing the well-publicized kidnapping and subsequent murder of a little Mormon girl that summer, Harmer said that those who "tell the leaders of the Latter-day Saint Church that they should not come forward and speak out because they would be imposing their moral standards on others should talk to the parents of Rachel Runyan."

The battle over cable television began with Sellenet's shepherd a bill through the 1981 Legislature that prohibited the broadcast of any "indecent" material on the cable — the law was struck down by a federal judge for being impermissibly vague and creating "the inherent danger of undertaking regulation of expression."

When the 1982 Legislature failed to enact new legislation, Harmer began his petition drive, which would force the legislators to either pass a censorship bill or submit the measure to the voters as an initiative.

According to the proposed law, "indecent material" would be defined as: "a human sexual or excretory organ or function."

"Or a state of undress so as to expose the human male or female genitals, pubic area or buttocks with less than a fully opaque covering, or the showing for erotic purposes of the female breast with less than a fully opaque covering of any portion thereof below the top of the nipple."

"Or an ultimate sexual act, normal or perverted, actual or simulated."

"Or masturbation."

"Or flagellation, torture, or other violence indicating a sadomasochistic sexual relationship."

"Which the average person applying contemporary standards for the television medium would find is presented in a patently offensive way."

As Harmer's supporters gathered signatures, the legislative action shifted to local jurisdictions. Soon, North Ogden and Roy and Weber County had ordinances to censor cable television. In Davis County, the town councils of Kaysville and Fruit Heights considered tight restrictions.

Further south, the Bluffdale City Council banned cable television altogether after two-thirds of the townspeople expressed their desire for control of cable programming.

The cable companies argued that no X-rated movies were ever shown on their movie channels. They pointed to their program guides, which include warnings describing the level of violence or nudity. They offered to provide key boxes so that parents could keep the cable channels off-limits for their children. All to no avail.

And as the battle raged, the Mormon Church kept up a steady stream of invective against pornography.

The Mormon produced newsletter, the Church News, carried the text of a speech given by Richard Lindsey, the director of the church's political action arm, the Special Affairs Committee.

"Communities can stem tide," read a headline, and Lindsey urged his readers: "Review local obscenity laws. Are they effective? Do they need revision? Are the penalties severe enough? Tell lawmakers how you feel about obscenity."

The church-owned afternoon newspaper, the Deseret News, got into the act, too. "They published a blunt editorial calling on local municipal bodies to use their full powers to control cable TV material coming into their communities," recalls J.D. Williams, professor of political science at the University of Utah.

"It was not without significance that the very next night the little town of Roy adopted their censorship ordinance," Williams says. "This recent condemnation about cable TV clearly provided the underpinning and the go-ahead for that town passing its censorship ordinance."

"Cable television is a hot issue now," says Decker. "And any sort of delphic utterances get picked up. When Gordon Hinckley made his statement, it was used by censorship supporters as if the church was endorsing their movement."

Michele Wood, head of Planned Parenthood Association of Utah, sometimes brings son Thbrnton to work

Hinckley. It is impossible for a non-insider to determine.

Says Holbrook: "My worst-case scenario is that they let it happen because it is really where they are at. And then from time to time give expressions that the church isn't really involved when the damage has already been done."

Joy Beech wasn't pleased when her ally, John Harmer, announced that he had received the tacit endorsement of the Mormon Church.

Beech, a North Ogden housewife, is the founding director of the Citizens for True Freedom and co-organizer of the Coordinating Council in Utah, an alliance of conservative "pro-family" advocacy groups like the United Families of America, the Eagle Forum, the Utah Association of Women and the Moral Majority.

She got her start around Ogden, fighting adult bookstores and demanding that such "pornographic" books as "Jaws," "Serpico," "Raisins in the Sun" and "The Happy Hooker" be banned from school libraries.

It was Beech who designed the complex network of CTF "watchdogs" and "block leaders" who "watch over the block where they live and make careful note of neighbors inclined to uphold morals."

She even has received letters of appreciation and a $100 contribution from top leaders of the Mormon establishment. But she thinks that an open-church endorsement can be a hindrance.

"Once you start claiming things like that, you find people get all apathetic," Beech says. "People move here thinking that Utah is a paradise, and that the church speaks and everyone just falls in line. But that isn't true. You still have to organize on the grass-roots level. If the church were enough, I wouldn't have to put in my 18-hour days."

But even Beech concedes, that "the church does influence people. It influences the principles of people on moral issues."

Michele Wood is the besieged executive director of the Planned Parenthood Association in Utah. The holy war against the organization that began in Bountiful has spread across the state.

For the last three years, Planned Parenthood's five clinics — along with a private family-planning clinic in Park City — have been under attack by New Right legislators and organizations like the Mormon-dominated Utah Association of Women.

Planned Parenthood doesn't dare perform abortions in Utah. "The predominant religious force is against it, and so the concept of abortion is a difficult one here," she says.

Two years ago, a bill almost passed the Utah Legislature to outlaw the medical procedure of amniocentesis (which can determine if a baby will suffer from birth defects) because it might increase the number of therapeutic abortions in the state.

Wood's clinics do provide advice on birth control and abortion counseling to their clients, however, including minors. Though the church frowns on such services, there is ample need, as Utah is a national leader in the number of teenage pregnancies conceived out of marriage.

The crusade against the organization finally ended in October when a federal judge in Washington, D.C., ruled that the government was well within its rights to cut more than $300,000 from Planned Parenthood's federal grant.

Now, Wood's organization has had to raise the fees it charges, and has laid off one-fourth of its employees.

"In the end, the money might not be worth it," Woods says. "If we don't get federal funds, then people can't continually stab at us and take us to court and keep us tied up and tied down with legal fees. It is a part of a ploy to deplete our reserve funds. The last appeal cost us $10,000."

"It is not the Mormon Church in terms of policy. All they say is, 'Women: here are the issues. You need to get involved.'"

"But it is a very conservative culture here, and the decision makers within the church and society are for the most part highly conservative right-wing people."

"And the resultant cultural influence definitely earmarks our organization as bad and corrupt. It's not in their policies. It's not in their statements. It's in all the other stuff that goes on here. The heavy peer pressure. Getting all the controls in place."

"It's subtle. It's all very subtle."

What's what

Take two people, a man and a woman, lost separately in a desert. The man, it's thought, is more likely to find his way out. That thing called sense of direction is considerably stronger in men than in women. Or so conclude university scholars after testing numerous students. Their test, might mention, was nothing more than the child's game called Blind Man's Bluff. The men are better at it. Much better.

If you don't count proper nouns, "shipmanship" is the only word in English that both begins and ends with the same four letters, says our language man.

TOMATO

Q. Wasn't the eating of tomatoes once thought to incite cancer?
A. Correct, some believed that. And some believed tomatoes were poisonous otherwise. Then in 1834, an Italian immigrant joined several other courageous souls in a public demonstration to convince everybody tomatoes were all right — they ceremoniously ate a whole lot of them. Good year, 1834. Thomas Davenport invented the electric motor then. And that classic ditty, "Turkey in the Straw," came out.

Q. What's "love pollution"?
A. What the swift sophisticates these days call venereal disease.

Q. What's the greatest number of capital convicts ever executed nationwide in one year?
A. 199. In 1933.

Democrat plans counter State of the Union

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Democrats, largely ignoring President Reagan and the GOP, presented their own program Tuesday for long-range economic recovery, a strong defense, nuclear arms reduction and energy independence.

After dismissing Reagan's economic program as a "gamble that failed," they presented step-by-step alternatives "to repair and build a strong economy and a strong America."

"We think, frankly, it's time we put up or shut up," Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Ind., said in introducing the Democratic response to the president's State of the Union address. The half-hour program aired on network television and radio nationwide following Reagan's speech.

The Democrats paraded a carpenter, a housewife, a college student, two farmers, an unemployed factory worker, two high school students, a union leader, a retired businessman and a score of House and Senate members to present their programs and their hopes for the nation.

"Over the past two years, the Democratic Party has offered a positive and realistic alternative, but the story was missed because the failings of Reaganomics became front-page news and our alternatives were pushed to the back page," said House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the party's House campaign committee, in a joint statement.

The Democrats propose lower interest rates and a new federal board to regulate them; tax reform through adoption of a proposal by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., for a "fair tax law" that includes elimination of loopholes and an across-the-board reduction of tax rates; and "control" of federal spending, in part through cutting the defense budget.

The Democrats proposed heavy investment in research and development, training of the nation's work force, rebuilding the nation's highways, bridges and other public facilities, energy self-sufficiency by 2000 and a strong military plus a mutual and verifiable reduction in nuclear weapons.

They called for a "tough" trade policy, but not protectionism against foreign goods, putting American back to work but no massive public works jobs program, and mutual arms reduction but not a nuclear freeze.

Party spokesmen said there is no indication how much the Democratic program would cost because the price tag of each aspect would have to be figured out as legislation is introduced.

They said the policies were developed jointly by the House and Senate Democratic leadership, but individual proposals do not necessarily represent party position.

Coelho said the program dealt with Democratic alternatives "because our polls have concluded people don't believe we have alternatives."

The Challenger is test fired Tuesday

Grain deal signups kept under wraps

United Press International

Many of the nation's grain farmers, offered a tradeoff deal of surplus grain for notowing their own crops, were reported interested in the government's newest farm gimmick Tuesday, but total signups were being kept secret in fear some of them might try to "outsmart the system."

A number of skeptical farmers, however, questioned how effective the program could be in easing the plight of grain farmers suffering from low prices and heavy surpluses.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said he ordered a blackout on enrollment information because heavy signups might prompt some farmers to stay out of the program in hopes of growing more of their own crops and earning more money.

"I think sometimes these signups are self-defeating," he said. "Farmers will go ahead and try and outsmart the system."

"That's a natural thing to do," he said. "So that we don't outsmart the system, let's just not report all this stuff. Let's play the game based on the facts we have."

Agriculture officials said they expected the "payment-in-kind" program to tie about 23 million acres of farm land this year.

The program is limited to farmers who grow wheat, corn, grain sorghum, cotton and rice.

For taking anywhere from 10 percent to 30 percent of their land out of production, farmers were offered government-owned surplus crops at harvest time.

Cyanide discovered in city's water system

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Traces of deadly cyanide were discovered Tuesday in a south Louisiana city's water system, giving a frightening new twist to a rash of threats that deprived nearly 250,000 residents of drinking water.

As tests turned up cyanide in Hammond, seven more cities reported threats of contamination, bringing to 22 the number of Louisiana cities affected by the scare of tainted water since Friday.

One of the cities reporting a threat was outside Louisiana. A telephone caller said the water in Brazil, Ind., had been spiked with nerve gas. City officials said the threat was a hoax.

The initial threats in Louisiana prompted almost every affected town to turn off water systems. Bottles and tankfuls of drinking water were brought in until tests were completed and water systems were flushed.

But by Monday, after more than a dozen threats had been made, some communities receiving cyanide calls decided against shutting down water systems. Residents were told not to drink water until chemical tests had been completed.

Mayor Debbie Pope urged the citizens of Hammond, a city of 15,000 people 50 miles northwest of New Orleans, not to panic. She said the amount of cyanide went beyond anything expected to show up accidentally but was too small to be dangerous.

Reagan says he's not worried about polls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, beset by a series of new polls that show his popularity plummeting, dismissed the findings Tuesday by saying the people speaking against him now didn't vote for him anyway.

"Are you concerned about your drop in the polls?" a reporter asked, during a picture session in the Cabinet Room.

"Not really," he replied.

Two polls, one by the Washington

Post and ABC News, the other by The New York Times and CBS News, released the day of Reagan's State of the Union address, show the president's popularity at a new low.

The Post-ABC poll taken Jan. 18-21 found that 54 percent of those questioned disapprove of Reagan's handling of the presidency and 42 percent approve of his performance — a negative shift of 17 points since October.

The Times-CBS poll, conducted

Jan. 16-19, showed 47 percent disapprove of the way Reagan is handling his job and 41 percent approve — and found the unemployment problem the main reason for the decline.

Pollster Louis Harris reported over the weekend that a telephone poll of 1,254 people early this month showed Reagan receiving a 61 percent negative rating for overall job performance to 38 percent favorable.

Protesters offer own assessment of nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Community activists, demanding "shelter, jobs," knelt in prayer under the dome of the Capitol Tuesday in a "state of the union" demonstration that ended with over 150 arrests.

About 250 people joined in the protest that began on the steps of the Capitol nine hours before President Reagan's State of the Union message to Congress.

Watt retracts Indian statement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt apologized to Indians Tuesday for his "hurtful" remarks about failed socialism on the reservations and said the abuse they have suffered from the government must end.

"If my words have caused hurt, I apologize for that," Watt told a gathering of the National Congress of American Indians.

He referred to an interview broadcast Jan. 20 in which he said: "If you want an example of the failures of socialism, don't go to Russia. Come to America, and see the American Indian reservations."

The speech by Watt, whose department supervises the nation's forests, came the day after President Reagan announced an Indian policy aimed at encouraging self-government among tribes and making reservations more economically self-sufficient.

Reagan proposed that the federal government move away from its "surrogate role" regarding Indian tribes and that the tribes reduce their dependence on federal funds but be eligible for block grants for social services.

Watt, when introduced to the gathering of about 400 people at a downtown Washington hotel Tuesday, received only scattered applause. But the audience interrupted him immediately after his apology with a loud ovation.

"Maybe I used some hurtful language, but I got attention," he told the executive council of the Indian Congress, which is meeting this week in Washington.

"But I don't apologize for the message," Watt said. "For the Indian people of America have been abused by the United States government, and that has got to change."

He argued that past administrations have "thrown money at some of the symptoms, not the cause" of social and economic problems besetting Indians. "I want something to happen in Indian country. I want to solve problems."

Reagan's new Indian policy calls for greater involvement of private industry in developing the economies of the Indian reservations, stating that both the nation and the tribes "stand to gain from the prudent development and management of the vast coal, oil, gas, uranium and other resources found on Indian lands."

Shuttle leaking hydrogen

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — At least one of the space shuttle Challenger's three main engines leaked hydrogen during a test-firing Tuesday, forcing a new day of up to a month in the maiden flight of the second space freighter.

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, associate space agency administrator, said the 24-second firing, a repeat of one that turned up the leak December 1, left no doubt that flammable hydrogen gas was leaking into Columbia's tail section from somewhere in the engine system.

The problem, Abrahamson said, is that engineers so far have been unable to pinpoint any leaks in the engine fuel system despite their best efforts.

New cattle pest brings another quarantine

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A state quarantine on infected livestock appears to be controlling the spread of a virus disease, but a new quarantine program to control another livestock pest was announced Tuesday.

The new quarantine, which affects 11 cattle herds in eastern Idaho, is needed to control an outbreak of vesicular stomatitis, says Greg Nelson, the state veterinarian in the Idaho Department of Agriculture. And the quarantine soon could be stretched to cover all cattle in Bear Lake, Bannock, Franklin, Clark and Caribou counties, he says.

The quarantine is due to a mite that burrows under the skin of cattle and causes intense itching, Nelson says.

"This particular one spreads like wildfire," Nelson says. "The treatment to control the mite is relatively simple. It's costly, but it's certainly solvable," Nelson says.

Cattle must be dipped in a pesticide solution to protect them from the mite. And cattle already affected by the mite must be "double dipped," Nelson says. The second dipping must occur within about 10 to 14 days of the first. After the second dip, the quarantine is lifted on an animal.

The purpose of the quarantine is to ensure that the "dip order" is not ignored, he says.

"It appears we'll be dipping upwards of 25,000 to 50,000 head of cattle to get it out of the state," Nelson says.

The disease appears to be confined to eastern Idaho, but affected animals may have been sold and moved to other portions of the state. The symptoms of the mite — "scratching like mad" and lower feed consumption — are probably evident in those animals now, Nelson says.

Meanwhile, the quarantine on herds with the virus disease vesicular stomatitis may have succeeded in stopping the spread of the disease, Nelson says, although the quarantine probably will continue for about 30 more days. There are 33 herds under quarantines, which last about six weeks. Agricultural officials are no longer finding new cases, though.

The number of quarantined herds is below the 50 that those officials once estimated would be affected.

"At first, we were concerned that maybe people weren't reporting it. The owners were so scared, they didn't know if they would be hauled in front of a firing squad or what," Nelson says. "But they didn't sell anything, either. They just sat tight."

Vesicular stomatitis causes blisters in the mouths of livestock and sore feet. The most severe outbreaks of the disease occurred in the Magic Valley. Humans also can contract the disease, suffering the same mouth sores as livestock, plus flu-like symptoms.

The disease first appeared in Idaho late last summer. It was supposed to disappear when cold weather killed the flies and other biting insects that spread the disease. But the disease continued to spread directly from infected animals to healthy animals, Nelson says, something that had not been thought possible.

Several states have prohibited the import of Idaho dairy cattle until vesicular stomatitis is controlled in the state.

A quarantine was necessary to stop the movement of infected cattle, thus stopping the spread of the disease, which would allow markets in California, Montana and Utah to be reopened to Idaho ranchers, Nelson says.

If the quarantines on herds with infected animals had not worked, Nelson says he was considering stopping all livestock sales in the state, in an effort to control the disease before spring brought a return of the insects that traditionally spread the disease.

Be careful where you bathe

Hot tubs can be breeding ground for contagious bug

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Occasionally, the steaming, bubbling water of a public hot tub holds more than promises of rest and relaxation.

Three years ago, residents of a "time-share" condominium in southeastern Idaho began to develop a strange, annoying rash, mostly on their chests, lower bodies and legs.

When the local health department was contacted, officials quickly discovered that affected residents regularly used the condominium's whirlpools or bubbling hot tubs.

Further investigation showed that out of the 200 persons using the hot tubs and swimming pool, 62 or 31 percent, had developed a rash and other symptoms, including earaches, headaches, sore throats and swollen glands.

Tests revealed the presence of a bacteria called Pseudomonas aeruginosa — often associated with public bathing spots — in two of the hot tubs.

As Brian Dixon, an environmental health specialist with the District Seven Health Department in St. Anthony, explains, Pseudomonas is a common bacteria that can thrive in the warm, moist setting of a hot tub and is somewhat resistant to chlorine. Heat from a long hot-tub soak opens the body's pores and allows bacteria to establish itself on the skin.

While the uncomfortable rash that results usually disappears in three to four days, some condominium residents were ill for several weeks.

The elimination of the Pseudomonas was relatively simple. Dixon had found that for a few days, chlorine levels in the hot tubs had dropped below the recommended safety level, allowing the bacteria to grow.

So, the tubs were drained and scrubbed, and the filters were cleaned. The swimming area also was swabbed down. Automatic chlorinators were installed.

No future problems were reported, and the residents went back to enjoying relaxing soaks.

But as the fad of getting into hot water continues to grow, Idaho public health officials are faced with the question of whether public hot tubs should be inspected and regulated, as public swimming pools are now.

Whirlpools, spas and hot tubs have become increasingly common at motels, hotels and athletic clubs, as well as special bathing facilities and in private homes.

And while health officials have no jurisdiction over the hot tub you put in your backyard, they do have concerns about the commercial whirlpools used by the public.

The more people frolicking in a hot tub, the more chlorine is dissipated, and the more likely an infectious bug might establish a foothold, they say.

So far, the major problem associated with Idaho's public hot tubs, has been occasional outbreaks of Pseudomonas — about

Alcohol center defends judge

In attack Monday by county attorney

By MARTY TRILHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Alcohol Recovery Centers officials have denounced Twin Falls Prosecutor Harry DeHaan for making an unfair attack on Judge Daniel Meehl.

Monday, DeHaan said he would seek to disqualify Meehl from presiding over many of the criminal cases that normally come before Meehl in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls. DeHaan charged that Meehl is too lenient on criminal defendants.

What has upset MVARC officials is DeHaan's criticism of Meehl's association with the alcoholic-treatment organization. DeHaan alleged that Meehl, who is a member of the organization's board of directors, has referred criminal defendants to MVARC in order to provide financial support for it.

MVARC officials countered Tuesday by saying the charge is false. Meehl has provided only 1 percent of the institution's cases during the past 12 months, they say.

"I think the statement that he (DeHaan) made about Judge Meehl was irresponsible," said attorney Greg Fuller of Jerome, who serves as chairman of the MVARC board. "I really think Judge Meehl is beyond reproach."

But Fuller says he does not intend to take any further action against DeHaan.

According to MVARC records, Meehl referred five cases to MVARC during the past 12 months. During that period, the private organization treated 541 clients.

In all, judges referred 21 cases to the organization. Meehl's colleagues in Twin Falls County accounted for another five referrals. Magistrate Judge Michael Redman made two referrals, and district Judge Theron Ward and magistrate Judges Melvin Edwards and Charles Brumbach made one each.

In addition to the low percentage of cases attributed to Meehl, is the fact that MVARC is usually without vacancies, the officials say.

"It's quite obvious that Judge Meehl's referrals don't support us or keep us open," says executive director Barry Meyers. "Most of the time, we have a waiting list."

Meyers added that a referral simply initiates an evaluation by the organization, which has its own standards.

"Simply because Judge Meehl or Judge Redman refers someone, it does not mean they will be admitted," Meyers says.

As recall drive begins

Councilman explains his vote on appointments

By MARTY TRILHAASE
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The man who provided the crucial vote at Monday's Kimberly City Council meeting says he was not satisfied with charges that two city appointees should be replaced.

"I think there were some valid complaints. But under the circumstances, I just had to weigh it out," says Councilman Sterling Crothers, whose vote Monday assured the reappointment of Bill Malone as the public works director and the law firm of Langley and Greenwood of Twin Falls as the city's legal counsel.

Council voted 3-to-1 in favor of the incumbents.

"I feel we still have good control of the situation," Crothers said. "I feel we did the best, under the circumstances, for the public interest at the moment."

Crothers was absent last week when Mayor Rosalea Whitehead's appointments of Malone and the law firm were blocked by the negative vote of Councilman Mike Langford. Councilmen Ted Waske and Avis Allen supported the appointments, but confirmation required the support of three council members.

Contrary to the news story in Tuesday's Times-News, Whitehead did not resubmit the appointments to council on Monday. Instead, she left it to council to both appoint and confirm the candidates for the positions.

Crothers had not disclosed how he would vote prior to Monday's meeting. And he indicated Tuesday that he was not satisfied with the reasons given by Langford for opposing the appointments.

"Some of the main thinking on my part was that you just can't dismiss someone without having some pretty good credentials," he said.

Crothers added that he is satisfied that council members will continue to exercise ultimate control over city matters and city employees.

"That's what I would like to point out. We did that under the circumstances, but that doesn't mean we sold the city," he said. "I think that might be comforting to people if they are misunderstanding that."

In a related development, a Kimberly woman indicated Tuesday that a recall drive against Whitehead, Waske, Crothers and Allen will begin early next week.

"It's just a group of citizens who are tired of being ignored, and they want their voices heard," said Karen Mack, who also was involved in a petition drive designed to support Langford's efforts. Workers in that effort claimed 115 signatures by the time they submitted the petitions to council earlier this week.

Idaho law requires that 20 percent of the registered voters in a community, in the most recent election, must sign such a petition before a recall election can be held.

To include only minimum-security inmates

Knigge 'scales down' his Gooding prison plan

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — A proposal to establish a prison in Gooding has been refined so that it would include only minimum-security inmates, the plan's sponsor said Tuesday.

"There are too many complications with trying to convert the old tuberculosis hospital into a place for hardened criminals," said Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Flr. "Right now, the idea is to house only drunken-driver offenders and bad-check writers at a Gooding facility."

Knigge said he toured the hospital — located at the far south end of town — on Saturday and was pleased to find the building in excellent condition.

"Even the kitchen facility is superb shape. Just like when the building was first abandoned," he said. "There are even some beds still there and some wheelchairs."

Knigge plans to ask for a feasibility study of his plan by the state's Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council, of which he is a member. Knigge also was a member of the special committee that examined the 1980 riot at the Idaho State Penitentiary. Knigge says that two major obstacles to the hospital's conversion exist:

• The heating system — a boiler and steam-pipe unit — reportedly costs more than $8,000 a month to operate, and therefore may require replacement.

• A recreation area would have to be built, at extra cost to the state, in order to comply with federal correction standards.

Knigge's plan is to move 165 minimum-security inmates from the state prison in Boise to the remodeled hospital at Gooding. He says all of the inmates would have to be non-violent offenders, possibly including 30 persons convicted of repeated drunken driving, who could be released part-time to the Walker Center for Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, also located in Gooding.

He says at least two area employers have offered to provide work-release opportunities for the inmates.

Meanwhile, Knigge says remodeling could then be done at the Boise prison to build expanded facilities for maximum-security inmates.

Despite decline in patients

Twin Falls hospital manages slim first-quarter 'profit'

By HARRIET GUTHRIE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has finished the first quarter of its current fiscal year in the "black," despite a drop in the number of days that patients spent at the hospital.

Controller Jeff Taylor told the hospital's board of directors Monday night that the number of patients was down generally, and reached an all-time low of 50 at Christmas. The hospital, however, finished December with a $47,000 surplus.

And hospital administrator Bill Burns reported that MVMC had saved around $63,000 by purchasing hospital supplies and services through a Hospital Corporation of America purchasing contract. Hospital Corporation of America provides the management for the county-owned facility.

In an earlier interview, Taylor said the hospital was on track financially because expenses were lower. The hospital also gained from its investment revenue.

"We're paying our bills," he said. In other business Monday, the board elected Jack Claiborn Jr. of Kimberly as its chairman and Doll Smith of Twin Falls as vice chairman. Don Sharp will serve as treasurer, and Melba Cook will act as secretary.

Claiborn, who will take over from Clarence Hofffield, has served on the board for more than three years. He is a lifelong Kimberly resident. Claiborn farms and has been active in farm organizations.

Smith has been a board member for seven years. She has lived in Twin Falls for 16 years and is a member of the Idaho Mental Health Association. She is a homemaker.

The board also voted to provide a recently developed hepatitis Type-B vaccine to 178 of the hospital's "high-risk" employees free of charge. Other employees can be immunized by paying half of the cost.

Hepatitis Type B is an extremely debilitating liver disease that can keep a sufferer out of work for up to six months, said Dr. John Martin.

Any employee who comes into contact with blood that can't be traced to a specific individual is considered a high-risk employee, he said. Lab technicians, emergency-room and housekeeping personnel are among those that fall into that category.

Martin said that lab technicians fear hepatitis so much, that most would pay for it on their own if they had to.

All employees won't be immunized free because of the vaccine's high price. Because the vaccine can only be cultured with human blood, the series of three shots costs $130, Martin said. If the hospital ordered the vaccine in bulk, however, the price would go down to $97, Burns said.

Board members concluded that the price of the vaccine was cheaper than the cost of possible lawsuits from employees who contracted the disease at work.

California arrests man for Burley kidnapping

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The man who allegedly abducted an 8-month-old Rupert baby was in the Oroville, Calif., jail Tuesday, after being detained on an second-degree kidnapping warrant issued in Idaho, according to Burley police.

Woodrow Ray Pritchett, 26, from California, was picked up by a Butte County sheriff's deputy early Monday morning while driving through Oroville. With Pritchett was the infant son of Peggy Slipsey, no age available.

hile, of Rupert, who reported the baby had been kidnapped Friday morning from a residence south of Burley, according to Burley and California law-enforcement authorities.

Slipsey told police she was acquainted with the suspect, and she suspected he was heading back to California, so Nevada and California authorities were notified. Burley police Chief Leman Messley said Tuesday.

No information was available Tuesday on the condition of the baby, who is in the custody of the Butte County Childcare Protective Services. Messley said.

Slipsey left for California on Tuesday to pick up the child, he said.

The abduction may have resulted from a "family dispute," Messley said.

Slipsey and Pritchett apparently had lived together at one time, the police chief said. However, it is unknown if Pritchett is the father of the child, Messley said.

Police would not say who was caring for the baby at the time of the incident, or why he was staying at the Burley residence. Details of the "dispute" were not released.

Under California law, Pritchett was arrested as a fleeing felon, based on the Idaho warrant, said Deputy George Keen, of the Butte County Sheriff's office. A lawyer has been assigned to represent Pritchett.

When the suspect returns to court Thursday, he will have a choice of remaining in California or waiving extradition to face the second-degree kidnapping charge in Burley, Keen said. If Pritchett decides to stay in California, Cassia County authorities then will determine if extradition proceedings are warranted, Messley said.

Vigils will mark nuclear-testing anniversary

TWIN FALLS — The 26th anniversary of the first atomic-bomb test at the Nevada Test Site will be marked with activities in the Magic Valley, in Idaho and around the country.

Candlelight vigils are scheduled to be held Thursday in Twin Falls, Ketchum and Boise.

Kerry Cooke, of the Snake River Alliance, a Buhl-based group, says the vigils will correspond with others held by groups and individuals across the country in response to urging from a Utah group, Citizens Call, which is composed of alleged radiation victims.

In Twin Falls, a candlelight vigil will be held at 7 p.m. at the Renaissance Academy, 502 Second Ave. E.

In Ketchum, the Groundwater Alliance will distribute information about a comprehensive test ban on nuclear testing, at the Ketchum post office from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and at the Sun Valley post office from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Thursday.

A candlelight vigil will start at 5:30 p.m. at the Ketchum Coffee Grinder and will include a short march through Ketchum.

At 7 p.m., the film "Paul Jacobs and the Nuclear Gang" will be shown at Betty's School, 391 First Ave., near the Ketchum post office. Admission is $1.

In Boise, the Snake River Alliance will hold a candlelight ceremony, beginning at 7 a.m., near the "peace tree" at the Boise Union Pacific railroad station.

Tubs

two or three a year, according to Dr. Charles Brokopp, a state specialist.

Certain viruses — causing stomach problems and diarrhea — also have been associated with accidental swallowing of water in public hot tubs, he says.

Temperatures of more than 104 degrees, combined with drinking alcohol, have been associated with hot-tub drownings in other parts of the nation.

Pregnant women also are advised to use hot tubs with caution; excessive heat may harm fetal development. The U.S. Product Safety Commission recommends that pregnant women spend no more than 15 minutes in water that is 102 degrees or more.

With proper use and precautions, hot tubs can be safe, relaxing and enjoyable. And thus far, the hot-tub and spa industry has set and tried to maintain high standards for itself, reports Peadar Gibby, an environmental health specialist with the South Central District Health Department in Twin Falls.

However, some states, such as Oregon and California, regulate the use of public hot tubs. Colorado health officials, alarmed at the increasing number of commercial bath businesses and resulting skin outbreaks, are lobbying for legislation to set public hot-tub standards.

Idaho has no regulations governing hot-tub use. While health departments insist public swimming pools, hot tubs are classified as therapeutic baths and not subject to regulation, according to Gibby.

Gibby says the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare has formulated possible hot-tub guidelines, which have been distributed for comment to the spa industry and local health officials.

The guidelines cover such areas as the construction, water supply and filtration equipment in tubs. A maximum water temperature of 105 degrees is suggested. The guidelines also say that public spas should be equipped with a chlorinator or disinfectant feeder.

No official action has been taken on the proposed rules, Gibby says. He notes that Idaho's hot-tub industry is still small, especially compared to that of Oregon or California.

In the Magic Valley, hot tubs, both private and public, have been gaining popularity. Whirlpools can be found at local health clubs and resort motels. The Twin Falls zoning board recently granted a special-use permit to a developer who is seeking to establish a hot-tub business off Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Redwood hot tubs — once at the forefront of the current hot-water fad — still may be the most aesthetically pleasing model, but if not properly maintained, they can be breeding grounds for pseudomonas.

"The people who purchase redwood tubs are pretty much asking for trouble," Brokopp says. "There is really no good way to disinfect them. It's not long before you have a wooden tub full of pseudomonas. If you do drain them and disinfect them, you destroy the wood."

Oregon has banned the use of redwood hot tubs in public facilities. Also, Idaho's proposed guidelines recommend that redwood hot tubs not be used for public bathing.

A compromise, sold in Twin Falls, is a tub with fiberglass lining for easy cleaning and a wooden exterior for a "natural" look.

With frequent cleaning, proper chlorination and caution in combining high temperatures and alcohol, hot tubs can relax the weary and ease stress and aching muscles, health officials say.

Your Spine & Health:
CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

By Dr. L.C. Landwehr D.C.

Brain and spinal cord form the central nervous system, which acts as switchboard in the complicated unit that makes up the human body. The spinal cord is contained in a canal which is formed by the vertebrae of the spine, properly aligned. Through out its length, all the different branches of nerves are given off to supply different areas and organs of the body.

Normal flow of nerve impulses, caused by one or more abnormality aligned vertebrae, may work on that specific area or organ and make it susceptible to disease, or cause improper functioning, pain and spasms. It is with chiropractic adjustments that improper alignment of the spinal segments can be corrected and normal nerve impulse transmission restored.

Bruins top Burley by 16 points

BURLEY — A 9-0 spree midway through the second quarter pointed the Twin Falls Bruins to a 66-50 non-conference victory over the Burley Bobcats Tuesday night.

The Bobcats, noted for their ability to knock off ranked teams in either the A-1 or A-2 divisions, held the Bruins to a 15-15 stalemate three minutes into the second period. But after Mike Rice and Darren Stuart picked up field goals to help establish a 24-19 Bruin lead, the Bobcats were never able to get closer than five.

It was the 13th win in 14 outings for Coach John Astorquia's Bruins and leaving them definitely looking at the school's winning record of 17-3 in seasonal play. The Bobcats, winners of six of their last seven games, absorbed their sixth loss against nine wins.

Twin Falls stays on the road for the rest of the week, playing at Minico Friday night where the possibility of sweeping up the No. 1 seed for district playoffs is the reward. Saturday the Bruins go to Idaho Falls to play the Bonneville Bees.

Through the first 11 minutes of the game, Burley did a great job of stopping Twin Falls' offense — except for junior Andy Toolson. Toolson who ended the night with 22 points, had 12 of Twin Falls' 15 to the point of the last tie. Only Oscar Salinas had scored from the field.

But as the second half began, the Bruins' second-leading scorer, Greg Snow, picked up two quick field goals and continued on to lead the night with 11.

Bruin Coach John Astorquia said two key things paved the way for victory.

"We hit the boards pretty well and I think that was the deciding factor, especially early in the game. Then we got the tempo up in the second quarter. I also felt our press helped us get our offense moving better."

Twin Falls' scoring problems were most evident in the early going when Burley limited the Bruins to four points in the first five minutes. But Burley couldn't get away and held only an 8-4 lead. Salinas and Toolson tied it up and Burley managed its final lead of the game at 10-9 when Rich Ralphs scored just before the first period ended. That expanded a little when Randy Austin scored a pair of free throws but Toolson then reeled off six points to sent the Bruins ahead to stay.

Burley managed one more tie when Dan Egbert and Greg Boyd scored three times from the line. But Rice then came up with a free throw and Bob Jones added a field goal. With 4:10 left in the half, Rice added two more free throws and Stuart and Bowen Call backed them with field goals to make it 24-15.

Ryan Hull and Austin pulled Burley back to within five before Call and Stuart hoisted Twin Falls back on top 29-21 at halftime.

Early in the third quarter, with Snow getting four quick points, Twin Falls broke on top by 12 but Tracy Bedke hit twice to close that to six. Salinas sandwiched a field goal between three Toolson free throws as Twin Falls moved back by 11 at the end of the quarter.

Ralphs, Scott Barrett and Bedke paced one last charge by the Bobcats midway through the final quarter, narrowing the deficit to 52-45. But Snow replied with a three-point play and Rice scored his ninth point after a steal. From then on Call hit enough free throws to hold the Bobcats at least 10 points away.

CSI's Naquin Knight battles for a rebound during Tuesday night's victory

CSI 'Rohrs' easily past Utah St. JV

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's probably a poor pun — and Utah State's junior varsity won't enjoy it at all — but College of Southern Idaho "Rohrs" past the Aggies to a 95-76 victory Tuesday night.

That's as in Phil Rohrs, folks. The 6-5 Albuquerque sophomore dropped up the days of the Moscow Bomber, Kim Goetz, with a bit of angle shots in transition. He also picked up six points on the offensive glass — and he sat out more than 10 minutes of the game. Doing most of his damage in the middle 20 minutes, Rohrs ended the night with 22 points.

At the outset, Coach Dave Campbell was a little dubious about this contest becoming win No. 14. Utah State, coached by former Minico and Utah State great Jim Boatwright, who also played several years professionally in the European league, came up with good size — headed by 6-10 Ron Hansen.

Meanwhile, some of Campbell's troops missed curfew Friday night and were on probation — including two of the usual centers, John Irbey and Chuck Glivick. Joining them on the tier immediately behind the player's bench were Brian Paul and Joe Vaadl.

That put all the pressure on freshman Ralph Barreras, but he scored the first point of the game and also got the first defensive rebound to signal things were okay in that department.

It also pointed up that Campbell didn't have to worry much more. In the first 10:27 of the game, CSI lit it up with 33 points and seconds later held a 35-13 lead. That expanded to 30 points on three occasions in the second half.

"The first 10 minutes we played super," Campbell said. "We defended very well with great intensity on both ends of the court and we passed extremely well. Short, crisp passes that got us the good shots."

Although CSI seemed to have all the best of it, Utah State got good scoring from Mark Cutler in the first half and Hansen in the second. Buck Fyre came up with 18 points, mostly in the closing eight minutes. Hansen paced the team with 24.

Cutler got all but two of his points in the first half. But his one-man scoring binge wasn't enough to offset CSI's torrid percentage. CSI cooled somewhat in the second half but still hit 43 of 90 attempts from the field while Utah State shot 46 percent for the night.

CSI started breaking it open after an 8-8 tie with three minutes gone. Ron Beach opened it with a howitzer and Gerald Kennedy picked up a pair of inside buckets. Beach hit another rainbow before Fyre got a three-point play for the Aggies.

Kennedy nullified that with one of his own the next time downtown and Barreras, Rohrs and Beach quickly extended the margin to 25-11. With the Eagles holding a 37-10 advantage, Rohrs went on his first streak. He scored 12 points in the first six minutes of the half to keep the Eagles on top 51-32.

Dewey Haley and Hansen had offsetting buckets to open the second half before the Eagles started stretching things out of proportion. Beach hit a long shot. Barreras added a crumpled off a break. Kennedy scored inside and Barreras added a follow shot to make it 61-34.

With 10 minutes left CSI had moved ahead 79-47 on a Naquin Knight field goal and the Eagles coasted in.

CSI will remain on the home court Thursday and Saturday night, hosting the BYU frosh Thursday and then North Idaho in a key regional matchup. The CSI JV will play Utah State at 5:35 p.m. Thursday and North Idaho at the same time Saturday.

Campbell said he anticipated a good battle with BYU, noting his Eagles had struggled to a 76-74 win in Provo last season. "They're big. They've got three or four players in the 6-8 and 6-9 area."

The coach said the CSI players on discipline Tuesday night might be better for Thursday's game.

Not wanting to get deeply into the matter, Campbell said "I can only tell you that they didn't make the 11 p.m. bedcheck. I can't tell you what time they came back because I didn't wait up for them."

Campbell added the earlier than usual curfew was in force because of the Eagles' game with Snow College Saturday night.

Hornets, Indians advance to district semifinals

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

WENDELL — Declo squashed any hopes of a Gooding upset late in the first half and Shoshone went to the free throw line often enough to defeat Kimberly in the quarterfinals of the A-3 Fourth District Girls Basketball Tournament Tuesday night.

Top-seeded Declo will meet No. 3 Shoshone at 8:15 p.m. Monday while Gooding and Kimberly, forced into the loser's bracket, will try to keep their state tourney bids alive Thursday.

In Tuesday's opening-round junior varsity action, Glenns Ferry and Kimberly took easy victories.

Declo 46, Gooding 22

Entering the tourney on a relative hot streak, Gooding failed to capitalize on the success of its pressure defense and fell in defeat, 46-22. The Senators forced Declo to make several turnovers in the opening half, but Jolene Toone's squad couldn't convert ball possession into baskets.

"It was a disaster," Toone said of the closing minutes of the first half when Declo overcame a four-minute scoring lull. The Hornets took a 17-8 lead with 6:03 to play when 5-11 center Lyn Darrington, who doesn't want to confess to being 6-foot, hit a single free throw.

Over the next four minutes Gooding's press stung the Hornets often, but Gooding could only muster a single fielder by Julie Clemons.

Darrington broke Declo's scoring silence at 1:49 for a 19-10 Declo lead. In the final five seconds of the half, Julie Gillette, Holly Bortz and Darrington all hit fielders and Declo was safely ahead 25-10 at the half.

Gooding failed to come any closer. Darrington led Declo, now 48-3, with 16 while Bortz had 12. Clemons paced Gooding, now 8-14, with 12 while Kelly Fossecoco's tourney troubles continued. Gooding's playmaker managed just four points after going scoreless in Gooding's opener. The 22 points was the second lowest scoring total of the year for the Senators, a 21-point effort in the season opener against Buhl being the low mark.

Looking ahead to Shoshone, Declo skipper Lynn Payne says tough defense and boxing out to hit the boards will be the key.

"We've got to play (Clarín) Osborn tough and (Lisa) Logosz," he said of Shoshone's inside-outside scoring punch. "We can't let Osborn dominate."

Wounded players still vow they won't miss Super Bowl

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI executive sports editor

LOS ANGELES — The walking wounded of the Washington Redskins and the Miami Dolphins Tuesday vowed that they would be ready for Sunday's Super Bowl.

"My back has tightened up again but I think I'm going to be able to play," said Miami kicker Uwe von Schamann. "I'm going to rest it all week and I won't do anything until Friday or Saturday. I'm taking a lot of heat treatment, trying to keep the muscles in the lower back loose."

Von Schamann hurt his back on a kickoff against San Diego two weeks ago. He rested for the entire week, leading up to last Sunday's AFC title victory over the New York Jets, and only determined that he could play during the pre-game warmups.

"I still feel it pulling, but it's not a kind of pain that I can't stand," he said. "I put a heating pad on it during the game and I was confident that with the padding I had, even if I got hit, it wasn't going to hurt any more than it already did. I think I'll be all right. I'm really more concerned with the kickoffs than the field goals. I kicked two field goals after I hurt it against San Diego, but I was just concerned about getting the distance you need on kickoffs."

Von Schamann kicked off three times against the Jets and appeared to have few problems.

Two other players knocked out of last weekend's title games — Miami fullback "Anzura" Franklin and Washington linebacker Monte Coleman — also felt they would be ready.

"I got a bad hit in the head," said Franklin, the AFC's No. 2 rusher who missed most of the second half against the Jets. "I was woozy, but I'm okay now. The doctors checked me out and said there were no problems. They gave me the go-ahead and I'm ready to play."

Coleman suffered a hamstring pull in the Redskins' NFC title victory over Dallas.

"It's still a little sore and it pulls a little," Coleman said, "but I'm going to make it. I've been taking a lot of heat treatments and sound treatments. This is not going to keep me out of the game. I'm really excited — this is my first Super Bowl — and nothing is keeping me out of it. We're all kind of tired — we got in at about 1 p.m. west coast time but we're all getting up for this."

Players from both clubs said they were weary from the long cross country trip Monday. Both clubs arrived in Los Angeles very late Monday night and the Dolphins, who used

Report: Hayes detests coach

Wednesday, January 26, 1983 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho B-5

HOUSTON (UPI) — A newspaper reports that forward Elvin Hayes blames Coach Del Harris for the troubles of the last-place Houston Rockets.

Hayes told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Tuesday that the Rockets should replace Harris, who he called "petty" and "paranoid," with Indiana Pacers Coach Jack McKinney.

Hayes, 37, the longest playing player in National Basketball Association history, lashed out verbally at his coach after being told Monday he would not be in the starting lineup Tuesday night for the first time in his 15-year career.

The Rockets hosted the New Jersey Nets.

"He's a petty person. He's paranoid. And he's not a good coach," Hayes said.

"Hayes said Harris told him he was moving up an agreed-upon timetable that had Hayes stepping down from a starting role next month so that young forward James Bailey could get more experience."

Hayes admitted that during a 113-96 loss to Portland Saturday he failed to carry out Harris' order to screen a Portland player on an offensive play and was immediately benched.

"Here I am, the night after I played 39 minutes and scored 35 points against Kansas City, and we're in a tight game, and I'm sitting on the bench... that was ridiculous, and so was the offense that he had in that game," Hayes said.

Harris said after publication of the story he would continue with his plan to bench Hayes.

"I'm moving him to a reserve role in the best interest of the franchise and of the present team, and of Elvin Hayes and James Bailey. It's as simple as that," he said.

"In other words, as we look to the future, we want to see if James Bailey can be effective as a starter and if Elvin can become effective as a reserve. It's a coaching decision."

He said he did not consider the decision appropriate for public debate.

General Manager Ray Patterson refused comment until he met with Hayes Tuesday afternoon.

Alleged dunkster gets new trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Basketball's dunk shot was the key issue Tuesday in the reversal of the conviction in a Queens bank holdup of a man who seems to be an incredible athlete.

The issue was argued at length by a sharply divided 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan. The majority ordered a new trial for Howard Brown for his alleged part in the $7,000 bank stickup.

The issue was whether Brown could, as he boasted, jump and reach over the rim of a 10½ foot high basket from a standing position with his street clothes on. Brown is 5-11.

That issue became important because of what Brown is alleged to have told an FBI agent and what he says he told his girlfriend, who challenged his dunking ability.

Brown allegedly told an FBI agent that from a standing position he jumped and grabbed the top of the bank's Plexiglass handrail — 10 to 12 feet high. He told the agent he pulled himself over the rim into the tellers' section and grabbed the money.

The majority of the appeals court ruled that since Brown made this alleged admission without an attorney present his constitutional right to a lawyer was violated and his conviction had to be reversed.

At trial, Brown told a different story in protesting his innocence. He testified that two days before the holdup, he was in the bank with his girlfriend and she challenged his dunk shot prowess.

In response, he said, he leaped from a standing position, reaching inside the handrail barrier, leaving incriminating fingerprints.

"Brown's story," the majority said, "cannot be believed because it is so incredible that it is not credible." The majority said that if he had been attempting to dunk an imaginary basketball, he would have reached up and over the rim of the barrier, leaving his fingerprints just inside the top.

Chisox discuss taking Jenkins

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox, who lost a chance at signing veteran New York Yankees pitcher Rudy May, huddled Tuesday to decide whether to select veteran Ferguson Jenkins from the rival Cubs or another major league player.

The American League ruled earlier in the day that May was not eligible to be on the Yankees' unprotected list because the veteran southpaw had a no-trade contract.

May, 39, was chosen by Chicago last Thursday as compensation for losing outfielder Steve Kemp, a Type A free agent, to the Yankees.

The White Sox said they would announce their decision at 8 a.m. MST today.

Seattle, which had the option to retain its original pick, Dan Tartaball from the Cincinnati Reds' organization, or select another player, decided to stay with him.

The Sox had considered taking Jenkins last week when they surprisingly found his name on the Cubs' unprotected list. The 38-year-old right-hander, who led the Cubs with victories in 1982 with 14, is 12 shy of the 300 mark.

Sox President Eddie Elnhorn reportedly has favored Jenkins as the best choice after May. General Manager Roland Hemond and Chairman of the Board Jerry Reinsdorf were less enthusiastic about opening up a possible war with the cross-town rival Cubs.

Cubs' General Manager Dallas Green had little comment on the Sox's decision not to protect Jenkins, who signed a two-year contract in December.

"The sensitivity of this issue is such that we're still under a no-comment basis," Green said. "These things are very secret and are supposed to stay that way."

The voiding of May's selection came after his agent had complained the Yankees had to protect him because of the no-trade clause in his contract. The American League supported May's contention.

"Selection of Rudy May from the Yankees by the White Sox in the compensation selection procedure has been questioned by the Players Association and by May's agent," the league said. "The matter at issue was the termination of a 'no trade' agreement in the contract. After study and consideration, it has been determined that May should have been protected by the Yankees."

The league ordered the Yankees to place May on their protective list and take one player off the list.

May's agent, Dick Mess, argued that since May's contract with the Yankees runs through March, the Yanks were in violation by omitting May from their protective list.

The Sox reportedly are still interested in picking a pitcher in hopes of possibly triggering another deal that would land a third baseman. The Sox are interested in either Buddy Bell or Larry Parrish of the Texas Rangers and have dangled two pitchers as bait to try to land an infielder.

Tiger quartet want salary arbitration

DETROIT (UPI) — Pitcher Dan Petry, outfielder Kirk Gibson, third baseman Tom Brookens and pitcher Aurelio Lopez appear headed for arbitration of their salaries with the Detroit Tigers.

Petry, 15-9 last season and among the top 15 in ERA in the American League last season, has already filed and is believed seeking a salary of $390,000. The Tigers are offering $350,000, double what he made last season, plus incentives.

Gibson filed Monday, seeking more than the reported 10 percent raise Detroit was offering on his $200,000 contract of last season. Gibson injured his left wrist for the second time in three seasons and missed half the year.

Lopez, still in his native Mexico, and Brookens are eligible to file for arbitration. Brookens has indicated he intends to do so to protect himself, which he did last year although he signed before his case came up.

Nehemiah out of Millrose?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Renato Nehemiah, world record holder in the high hurdles, has been asked to withdraw from the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden Friday night because his status as a professional football player will jeopardize the amateur status of any foreign athletes competing against him.

Nehemiah, a wide receiver for the San Francisco 49ers, was ruled eligible by the United States Olympic Committee last week to compete in domestic meets against other Americans. However, the International Amateur Athletic Federation, which previously had barred Nehemiah from competing in international events, has forbidden any foreign athletes, including foreign-born athletes currently living in the U.S., from participating in any meets in which the star hurdler is entered.

Since there are a large number of foreign-born competitors entered in the Millrose Games, meet director Howard Schmetz said he had no choice but to ask Nehemiah to withdraw.

Cunningham to coach East

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Cunningham, coach of the Philadelphia 76ers, will coach the East team in the 33rd annual NBA All-Star Game on Feb. 13 at Inglewood, Calif., it was announced Tuesday.

The coaches of the teams with the best record in each conference through games of Jan. 30 draw the All-Star coaching assignments and Philadelphia is assured of having the best record in the East or being tied with Boston for the best mark in the East as of that date. Since Bill Fitch, coach of the Celtics, coached the East team last year, the honor would go to Cunningham in case of a tie.

Pat Riley, coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, will coach the West team since the Lakers are already assured of having the best record in the West through Jan. 30.

Starters for the All-Star Game, as determined by fan balloting, will be announced Sunday.

Additionally, it was announced Tuesday that Elgin Baylor and John Havlicek, two of the greatest players in league history of the National Basketball Association, will serve as honorary captains for the All-Star Game.

Baylor averaged 27.4 points per game during his 14-year NBA career and was a cornerstone of the Lakers' franchise. He was named to the All-Star team 11 times.

Havlicek excelled at both guard and forward for the Boston Celtics and averaged 20.8 points per game over a 16-year career. He was named to 13 All-Star teams, a record he shares with Will Chamberlain and Bob Cousy.

McEnroe, Lendl get top seeds

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Defending champion John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl, winner of last week's Masters championship, Tuesday were named the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds, respectively, for next week's $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championships.

The tournament begins Monday at the Spectrum. McEnroe, who defeated Jimmy Connors in last year's U.S. Pro Indoor final, finished 1982 as the world's top-ranked player after winning four consecutive tournaments late in the year.

By making a successful defense of his title in the Masters, which counts on the 1982 record, Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, finished 1982 with a total of more than $2 million in prize money and tied a record with 15 tournament victories. He is ranked No. 3 in the world.

Borg to play April exhibition

TOKYO (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, who announced his retirement from tournament tennis last Sunday, will face American John McEnroe in an exhibition match in Tokyo April 8-10, sponsors said Tuesday.

Wimbledon title holder Jimmy Connors and South African-born American citizen Johan Kriek completed the four-man lineup bidding for a $110,000 first prize.

Borg's coach, Lennart Bergelin, told reporters in Bangkok, Thailand, last Sunday the 25-year-old Swede would retire from tournament tennis but would continue playing exhibitions.

Borg, currently with his wife Marilena in Katmandu, Nepal, said Tuesday he felt better after deciding to retire although it was a difficult decision.

BAKING BREAD Fresh and Fast

For many, celebrations recall memories of wonderful times spent with loved ones. The giving of gifts, toasts to good health and happiness and above all, those marvelous meals.

Bread-baking has always been a traditional part of these festivities. Whetting the appetite and warming the soul, freshly baked home-made breads radiate to guests your sincerest messages of welcome.

A Consumer Reports tasting panel found they preferred home-made breads to commercially-baked breads. According to the report, commercial breads did not compare in taste. The home-made breads seemed to "melt in your mouth."

Making your own bread is easier than most people think. Two of the delightful classics pictured here, developed by the Fleischmann's® Yeast Test Kitchen, can be mixed, baked and served within 90 minutes.

Decorate your dining table with a delicious Herb Sour Cream Ring or Lemon Nut Spindle Rolls! Add the finishing touch to the feast with a Cherry Coffee Cake and hot beverage. And for those occasions when unexpected friends drop by, surprise them by serving a delicious home-made Nut Swirl Loaf.

These recipes are fast and fun, guaranteeing everyone a memorable celebration.

Makes 1 loaf

- | | |
|--|---|
| 2-3/4 cups unsifted flour | 1/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves |
| 5 tablespoons Fleischmann's® Margarine | 1 package Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast |
| 3 tablespoons sugar | 1/4 cup warm water (105°F-115°F) |
| 1/2 teaspoon dried marjoram leaves | 1/2 cup dairy sour cream |
| 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves | 1/4 cup cold milk (about) |

FOOD PROCESSOR PREPARATION:

With metal blade in place combine flour, 3 tablespoons Fleischmann's® Margarine, sugar, marjoram, thyme and oregano in bowl; process 5-10 seconds to combine. Dissolve Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast in warm water; pour through feed tube. Add sour cream and begin processing. Pour milk through feed tube in a fast stream until ball forms, about 10-15 seconds. Continue processing for 60 seconds to knead dough.

Carefully remove dough from processor bowl. Shape into a ball and place in a greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. Divide into 10 pieces and shape each into a ball. Arrange balls in a circle in a greased 6-1/2 cup ring mold. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour, 10 minutes.

Melt remaining Fleischmann's® Margarine; pour over dough. Bake at 375°F for 20 to 25 minutes, or until done. Remove from pan and cool on wire rack.

Makes 2 (9-inch) cakes

- | | |
|--|---|
| 3-2/3 cups unsifted flour | 1 package Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast |
| 1/2 cup Fleischmann's® Margarine, softened | 1/2 cup water |
| 1/2 cup Planters® Walnuts, chopped | 1/4 cup milk |
| 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon | 2 eggs (at room temperature) |
| 1/3 cup sugar | 1 can (21 oz.) cherry pie filling |
| | Confectioners' sugar frosting |

In a small bowl mix 1/3 cup flour, 1/4 cup Fleischmann's® Margarine, Planters® Walnuts and cinnamon until crumbly; set aside.

In a large bowl mix 1 cup flour, sugar and undissolved Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast.

Combine water, milk and remaining 1/4 cup margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°F-130°F). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and 1/2 cup flour. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough remaining flour to make a stiff batter. Spread evenly in two greased 9-inch round pans. Spoon half of the cherry pie filling over each in a ring, leaving the center unfilled. Sprinkle with prepared crumb mixture. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 375°F for 20 to 25 minutes, or until done. Cool in pans on wire racks. Drizzle with confectioners' sugar frosting before serving.

|---|
| 3-1/4 to 3-3/4 cups unsifted flour |
| 5 tablespoons sugar |
| 1 teaspoon salt |
| 1 package Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast |
| 1 cup water |
| 1/3 cup milk |
| 4 tablespoons Fleischmann's® Margarine |
| 3 tablespoons sugar |
| 3/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon |
| 1/3 cup finely chopped Planters® Walnuts |

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 1-1/2 cups flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, salt and undissolved Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast.

Combine water, milk and 2 tablespoons Fleischmann's® Margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°F-130°F). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto a lightly floured board and knead 4 to 5 minutes. Place in a greased bowl, turning to grease top.

On center rack of cold oven pour boiling water into a large baking pan to a depth of 1 inch. Place bowl of dough on a rack over pan of water. Cover. Close oven and let rise 15 minutes.

Remove bowl of dough from oven, punch down and turn out onto floured board. Roll out to a 12x8-inch rectangle. Melt remaining margarine, brush on dough. Mix remaining sugar, cinnamon and Planters® Walnuts; sprinkle dough with mixture. Roll up from short end like a jelly roll. Pinch edges of dough to seal. Place in a greased 8-1/2x4-1/2x2-1/2-inch loaf pan.

Replace boiling water in pan in oven. Place pan of dough on rack over water in oven. Cover and let rise 20 to 25 minutes. Uncover loaf and remove pan of water and rack. Turn oven to 375°F. Bake 30 to 35 minutes, or until done. Remove from pan and cool on wire rack.

Makes 1 dozen

| 3 cups unsifted flour |
| 1/4 cup Fleischmann's® Margarine |
| 1/4 cup sugar |
| 1 teaspoon salt |
| 1 package Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast |
| 1/4 cup warm water (105°F-115°F) |
| 1 egg |
| 1/2 cup cold milk (about) |
| 1/2 cup Fleischmann's® Margarine, melted |
| 1-1/4 cups firmly packed light brown sugar |
| 3/4 cup Planters® Walnut Pieces |
| 2 tablespoons grated lemon peel |

FOOD PROCESSOR PREPARATION:

With metal blade in place combine flour, Fleischmann's® Margarine, sugar and salt in bowl; process 5-10 seconds to combine. Dissolve Fleischmann's® Active Dry Yeast in warm water; pour through feed tube. Add egg. Begin processing, pouring cold milk through feed tube in a fast stream until ball forms, about 10-15 seconds. Continue processing for 60 seconds to knead dough.

Carefully remove dough from processor bowl. Shape into a ball and place in a greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Combine melted Fleischmann's® Margarine, 3/4 cup brown sugar and 1/2 cup Planters® Walnut Pieces; spoon into greased muffin cups.

Punch dough down. On a lightly floured board roll out to a 12-inch square. Combine remaining brown sugar, walnuts and lemon peel; sprinkle over dough. Roll up as for a jelly roll, pinching seam to seal. Cut roll into 1-inch slices and place, cut side up, in prepared muffin cups. Cover, let rise until doubled, about 1 hour.

Bake at 350°F for 30 minutes, or until done. Invert pan on wire rack. Let stand 3 minutes; remove pan and cool rolls on wire rack.

Make your croutons

Special to The Times-News

Packaged bread products such as crumbs, croutons and stuffing makings are an unnecessary expense. You can easily make your own and save what they would cost to use on something else.

Instead of throwing daily bread scraps and crusts away, save and store them, covered in a cool place until ready to use. These crumbs make good coatings for breaded foods.

Cube stale pieces of bread. Then dry them. When dry, fry them in a little salt and garlic-flavored butter or oil. These make tasty croutons for salads and soups.

Collect broken pieces of bread in a plastic bag until you have enough for your favorite bread stuffing. Then dry them and freeze them in airtight containers until you're ready to use them.

Besides making staple savings with your bread savings, you can use bread in regular, main-dish cooking. Here are a few ways to do it.

LEMON BREAD PUDDING

1 1/2 cups of scalded milk
1/2 cups of dry bread cubes
2 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons of margarine or butter
1/2 cup of sugar
pinch of salt
juice from 1 lemon
1/2 teaspoon each of almond and vanilla extracts

Preheat your oven to 325 degrees. In a mixing bowl, combine the milk and bread, and then cool. In another bowl, beat the egg yolks, and then stir in the milk mixture, along with the margarine or butter, sugar, salt, lemon juice, almond and vanilla extracts. In another bowl, beat the egg whites until stiff, and then fold into the milk mixture. Into a greased baking dish, pour the pudding mixture. Place the baking dish in a pan of water. Bake for 45 minutes or until a knife comes out clean. (Makes six servings.)

BREAD FRITTERS

1/4 cup of flour
1/2 teaspoon of salt

1 cup of milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon of sugar
1/2 teaspoon each of orange and vanilla extracts
3 tablespoons of melted margarine or butter
6-8 slices of stale bread, crusts trimmed off and saved margarine or butter for frying

Sift together the flour and salt. In a mixing bowl, combine the flour with the milk, beaten eggs, sugar and extracts, and mix thoroughly. Beat into the mixture the melted margarine or butter. Dip the bread slices into the batter, and let the excess batter drip from the bread. Then, fry in margarine or butter until browned on both sides. Serve hot with fruit syrup or sugar. Or, top with a scoop of ice cream and a spoonful of fresh fruit salad.

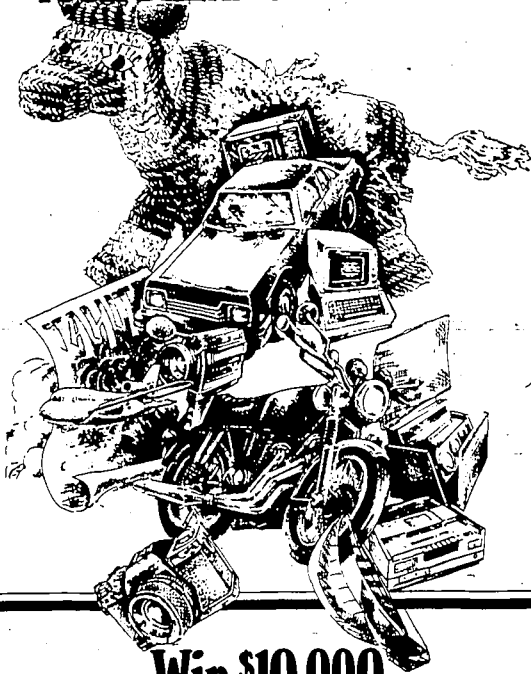

BREAD 'N' BEER SOUP

1 1/2 loaves of whole wheat and/or other dark bread
6 1/2-7 cups of water
grated rind of 1 lemon
salt, to season to taste
1/2 cup of sugar
pinch each of cinnamon and nutmeg
6 cans, 12-ounce size, of dark beer
1 cup of heavy cream, whipped

In a heavy kettle, put the slices of bread and water to cover. Cover and let stand for at least 12 hours. Bring the bread and water to a boil, and then lower the heat and cook slowly until the mixture becomes thick. Stir in the grated lemon rind, salt, sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Then stir in the beer. Bring all to a rolling boil, and then remove from the heat and serve hot, with toppings of whipped cream. If desired, sprinkle top of whipped cream with nutmeg. (Makes eight to 10 servings.)

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: There seems to be a good supply of salad ingredients everywhere. Citrus still is coming in. It is a sweet buy right now. The weather in the Northwest in the next few months will determine the type of fruit harvest we'll have this fall. It looks good so far.

Fresh banana flavor adds taste to these simple Banana Nut Rolls, which don't use yeast

Banana Nut Rolls special

SAN FRANCISCO — Just like those old-fashioned cinnamon rolls, warm and fragrant from the oven, Banana Nut Rolls are a special treat.

This recipe is simpler than the yeast-dough type, however. So you can make it in a lot less time. The dough is just mixed in a bowl, then lightly kneaded. Brown sugar and butter topping goes into muffin tins, the banana rolls on top, and that's it.

No time to bake this week? If you have an extra-ripe banana on hand, just peel them, wrap them in airtight plastic and store in the freezer. When you're ready to bake, the bananas will slice easily — right out of the freezer — and may be pureed in the blender immediately.

BANANA NUT ROLLS

- 1 cup butter, divided
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 3 small, extra-ripe bananas, peeled
- 2 cups flour
- 3 tablespoons granulated sugar

- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Divide equal amounts of 1/4 cup butter and 1/2 cup brown sugar into 18 muffin cups. Set aside. Slice bananas into blender. Puree until smooth, should have 1 cup. Combine flour, granulated sugar, baking powder and cream of tartar. Cut in 1/2 cup butter until particles are fine. Add pureed bananas; stir with fork to form a soft dough, using hands if necessary. Turn onto lightly floured board. Knead 10 to 15 times until smooth.

Roll in 18 x 12-inch rectangle. Spread dough with remaining 1/4 cup soft butter. Sprinkle with remaining 1/2 cup brown sugar, nuts and cinnamon. Starting at lengthwise edge, roll as for jelly roll. Cut in 18 slices. Place each slice in muffin cup. Bake in 400° F oven 15 to 17 minutes until golden. Invert immediately on wire rack to cool 2 to 3 minutes. Serve while hot. (Makes 1 1/2 dozen.)

'Coupon currency' savings totaled $1 billion last year

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

If it seems you used more coupons last year than ever before, there's good reason.

For the 12th consecutive year, the number of coupons distributed by manufacturers took a healthy leap upward — from 102 billion coupons distributed in 1981 to approximately 110 billion coupons in 1982. That's a lot of coupons!

All this "coupon currency" added up to a lot of savings at checkout counters across the nation. In 1982, almost $1 billion was returned to smart shoppers who clipped their coupons. The shoppers who saved the most were those who attacked the problems of "coupon chaos" with a little organization: a coupon wallet or file, and others who played the game of matching coupons up with all the interesting supermarket specials found in newspaper food sections.

In 1982, there was no embarrassment in handing the cashier a fist full of coupons. In fact, it became a kind of status symbol, as surveys showed that you were more likely to redeem coupons if you were a college graduate and had an annual household income of $25,000 to $34,999. (These figures were taken from ORC Marketing Index, August 1982.)

And, it seemed that the larger the coupon (file you carried with you into the store the greater the acknowledgement and respect you received from other shoppers. (Never mind the groan from the cashier.)

In 1982, double coupons became a national money-saving phenomenon. Shoppers traveled as much as a hundred miles for them. They caused hour-long waits for shopping carts. They emptied the shelves of couponed items. But it was well worth the effort as the stories of amazing savings amply proved. As quickly as they came, these price wars in disguise left just as quickly — to the sorrow of so many coupon clippers and the relief of so many supermarket managers.

What was the most popular coupon in 1982? Coffee coupons, of course. They had the highest value of any group of coupons (an average of 45 cents) and represented more than 13 percent of the total value of all coupons redeemed. What was the average coupon worth? If you guessed 10 cents, you were way off. The average coupon was worth a little more than 20 cents in 1982. That might come as a surprise to many shoppers, especially those who still say they can't be bothered with coupons.

In 1982, shoppers who went to the trouble of clipping, sorting and using their coupons reported savings of $200 to $400, and more if they were able to take advantage of double coupons. This far outweighed the cost attributed to couponing, $17.50, based on Department of Agriculture figures of three-and-a-half tenths of 1 percent of their total supermarket purchases.

Who were the coupon winners in 1982? We all were! Smart shoppers saved money, and both manufacturers and retailers sold more merchandise. That's what free enterprise is all about.

In next week's column, I will announce the winners of the Second National Supermarket Shoppers' Poetry Competition.

Girls play big role in food sales

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new study of family shopping habits casts teenaged girls in an increasingly significant role.

Thousands not only do the shopping for their mothers, but they also often make buying decisions on their own, the survey shows.

"With so many mothers working, teen daughters are often actual partners in managing the home," says Ruth Clark, senior vice president of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, which made the study for Seventeen magazine.

"They may have little choice in the matter, but the fact is they're the ones who have the time to go out and do the buying," Mrs. Clark says.

The girls and their mothers were asked about their buying decisions on nine different kinds of packaged goods ranging from breakfast cereal and bar soap to pet food and on five types of durables: stereos, typewriters, luggage, sheets and pillowcases and microwave ovens.

More than 80 percent of the mothers said breakfast cereal purchases had been influenced by the teenaged daughter. Some had bought it on their own, and others led their mothers to do so.

About 62 percent of the mothers said diet soft drink purchases also were influenced by the daughter's opinions or personal buying.

The same factors were cited by 68 percent of the mothers for toothpaste purchases, 55 percent for bar soap, and 35 percent for pet food.

The survey was made during September-October 1982, using questionnaires and personal interviews with a national probability sample of 633 pairs of mothers and their daughters, ages 13-19. The sample is representative of the 9.1 million American households in which there are both a mother and one or more teenaged daughters.

Questions about packaged goods applied to purchases during the year preceding the survey. Those about durables, from two to three years preceding the survey.

The interviews were conducted independently with parent and child. Mothers were asked to fill out a questionnaire while the daughter selected for the study was interviewed personally in another room by a representative of the research firm. Among durable goods, teenaged daughters' total influence on a stereo purchase was 47 percent; and on brand, 49 percent.

In almost all the 14 products studied, mothers said their teenaged daughters had significantly influenced their choice of brands.

Even experts disagree on wine match

By JEANNE LEMSE
UPI Family Editor

"A lot of people talk about wine and food and some people in the field have had compatibility tastings — but no one as far as I know has tried to quantify it."

The speaker is Louis P. Martini. Through a series of formal wine tastings with meals, the California winemaker hopes to determine numerically what specific wines people prefer with specific foods.

Martini said he plans to examine the statistics — possibly by computer — when about 800 to 900 have been accumulated.

So far he has tabulated opinions at lunches for wine writers in Dallas, Washington, New York and Chicago.

A restaurant chef in each city was asked to create a menu to serve with six Martini wines: the 1980 gewurztraminer, the 1981 chardonnay, three special selections — the 1976 cabernet sauvignon, the 1975 pinot noir and the 1974 zinfandel — and the winery's cream sherry.

Guests were asked to taste all six wines with each course, and rate each one and with the foods on a scale of one to 10.

The menu differed from city to city. The chardonnay, a white, was preferred with the fish courses in all four cities.

In New York, two reds — the cabernet and the zinfandel — tied for first place with the main course of filet of lamb with tarragon sauce. The cabernet and the pinot noir (the third red) were a tie to drink with the cheese course that preceded dessert.

In Dallas, the spicy white gewurztraminer was preferred with the dark meat quab with red wine sauce. Zinfandel, a red, was second choice. The zin was also a close second to the cabernet with the cheese course.

In Chicago, guests rated pinot noir number one with the dark-meated boned quail, while the chardonnay and the cabernet tied for a close second place. Guests at the same lunch preferred the pinot with the veal in sorrel sauce but voted a three-way tie between the chardonnay and two reds — cabernet and the zin — for second place.

The Washington lunch also included lamb, and guests voted a two-way tie between pinot noir and cabernet to go with it.

History of upside down cake vague

By GAIL PERRIN
Boston Globe

Pineapple Upside Down Cake is an American classic, but just when it was born, no one knows for sure.

According to Carolee Franz of Castle & Cooke Foods' Dole Pineapple, the recipe couldn't have been developed before 1903 because canned pineapple wasn't invented until then.

But it is obvious Americans were well acquainted with the cake by 1925 when the Hawaiian Pineapple Co., as Dole was known then, ran an ad for a recipe contest, looking for creative and original recipes using pineapple. The contest drew a response of 60,000 recipes, 2,500 of which were for Pineapple Upside Down Cake.

Franz says food history authorities report the term "upside down cake" wasn't used much before the late 19th century, but that style of baking could date as far back as the Middle Ages.

The early recipes for Pineapple Upside Down Cake were made in skillets — probably cast iron — and cooked on top of the stove, rather than in the oven. This technique dates back to days when cooks did not have bake ovens at home and nicknamed their dishes "skillet cakes."

Franz says this is the authentic recipe that won Dole's first recipe contest:

Drain the juice from 1 can (20 ounces) either crushed or sliced pineapple. Sift 2 cups flour. Stir again with 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Cream 1/2 cup butter or substitute, gradually add 1 cup sugar; cream well. Beat yolks and whites of 2 eggs separately. Add yolks to creamed mixture; mix well, then add flour and 1/2 cup milk alternately, mixing well. Fold in the 2 beaten egg whites and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in large frying pan. Spread 1 cup brown sugar over pan. Add pineapple (if sliced is used, place slices closely together on the sugar; if crushed, simply pour in the well-drained fruit). Pour cake batter over fruit. Bake in moderate (350 degree) oven for about 45 minutes. Turn upside-down on serving dish and garnish with maraschino cherries. Whipped cream may be spread on top.

For a quicker version, using a boxed cake mix, try this recipe: Drain 1 can (20-ounce) sliced pineapple, reserving syrup (should have 3/4 cup). Mix 1/4 cup butter in 10-inch cast iron skillet with heat proof handle. Stir in two-thirds cup packed brown sugar until just blended. Remove from heat. Arrange pineapple in butter mixture. Place a maraschino cherry in the center of each pineapple slice. Prepare 1 package (17 ounces) pound cake mix according to package directions, replacing milk with reserved pineapple syrup. Pour over pineapple in skillet. Bake in 350-oven 45 to 50 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 5 minutes. Invert on serving plate. Serve warm. Serves eight.

CONNIE JONES
Rt. 1, Jerome
Crazy crust pizza
(Deep-dish Type)

Batter:

- 1 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup milk

Topping:

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 onion, small-medium, chopped
- 1 can drained olive pieces
- 2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- 2 cups pizza sauce

Sauce:

- 2 cups tomato sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon each oregano, marjoram, sweet basil leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Grease and flour 9x13 pan. Prepare batter by combining all ingredients in a bowl, mix with fork until fairly smooth. Pour batter into pan. Thin the pan so that the batter spreads across the bottom of the pan. Break raw ground beef up into small pieces and spread evenly over the batter. Also distribute onions and olives evenly over the batter. Bake as is at 425 degrees for 25 minutes or until pizza crust is golden brown.

During baking time, prepare sauce by combining all ingredients in a small pan and heat on low, stirring to mix spices. Grate cheese. After 25 minutes, remove pizza, put 1/2 cups of the cheese evenly over pizza, then cover pizza with sauce and sprinkle rest of cheese on top. Return to oven for 10 minutes. Makes 6 pieces.

Molasses cookies old staple

By LINDA CICERO
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Q. Can you give me a recipe for a chewy molasses cookie? — M.C.
A. This is the standard recipe for a molasses cookie, a staple in cookie jars when sugar was either too expensive or not readily available in early America.

MOLASSES COOKIES

1/2 cup butter (old recipes used lard)
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup dark or light molasses, depending on taste
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon ginger

Melt the butter in the molasses over low heat, stirring frequently so mixture will not boil. Let it cool to room temperature, and add the sugar. Sift the flour with the salt, baking soda and spices, and add to the molasses mixture. Chill the dough if it is too soft to handle. Roll out about 1/4-inch thick on a lightly floured board. Cut with a large, floured cutter, and place on a greased baking sheet. Bake 8 to 15 minutes in a 375-degree oven, depending upon the size of the cookies, or until they are light brown. Loosen from the pan while still quite warm, and cool in a single layer on a rack.

Q. Please help me. I am looking for the recipe for coconut bars that was in the recipe book that came with the Sunbeam Mixmaster. It was a favorite of my friends and myself. — M.M.
A. I don't have the particular book you mention, but hopefully one of our readers will help.

Q. You once gave a recipe for turkey chop suey. I would like to know how to make egg drop soup to go with it. I love that soup, as does my family. — R.S.

A. Here's a simple recipe. It tastes best if you pour the eggs into the boiling broth immediately before serving.

EGG DROP SOUP

5 cups chicken broth
2 scallions, cut into 2-inch pieces
2 eggs
2 tablespoons cornstarch
6 tablespoons water
Heat the chicken broth in a saucepan. In the meantime, chop the scallions, lightly beat the eggs, and combine the cornstarch and water. Add chopped scallions to the boiling broth and cook for 1 minute. Slowly pour the cornstarch mixture into the boiling broth, stirring constantly until the soup boils again.

Pour the beaten eggs over the surface of the soup, and immediately remove the saucepan from the heat. Wait for 30 seconds, then stir once, and serve the soup in individual bowls or a tureen. Note: You can substitute 4 ounces of chopped watercress or 4 cups of chopped fresh spinach for the scallions, or use both scallions and spinach if you prefer.

Vegetarian diet lowers pressure

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Australian researchers report that a small group of healthy hospital workers developed significantly lower blood pressure when they gave up meat and switched to a vegetarian diet for six weeks.

Just what it was in their milk, eggs and plant diet that was responsible for the drop in blood pressure during the study is not known, but the scientists said it apparently was not related to sodium or potassium.

The blood pressure drop was most evident during the final week of the vegetarian diet period and blood pressure returned to previous levels within five to six weeks after the volunteers returned to their normal omnivorous diet.

Blood pressure is a major health problem in the United States affecting anywhere from 30 million to 60 million people. It is primarily treated by drugs, reduction of sodium intake and weight-reduction diets.

The scientists who conducted the vegetarian study are from the University of Western Australia, Royal Perth Hospital and the National Health and Medical Research Unit in Perth. They reported the findings in the Jan. 8 issue of Lancet, a British medical journal.

The study was prompted by several population studies suggesting that vegetarian diets had a blood pressure lowering effect.

The 58 test subjects between the ages of 25 and 63 were selected from 93 volunteers on the staff of the Royal Perth Hospital. One group was randomly put on an omnivorous diet for 14 weeks while two other groups were put on an omnivorous diet for the first two weeks and then on a lacto-ovo-vegetarian diet for one of two six-week experimental periods.

There was no change in the blood pressure of those who remained on the meat diet, but the scientists said there were significant drops in blood pressure in the other two groups when they were on a vegetarian diet.

Dill provides tastiness for many dishes

By GERALD ETTER
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

How ordinary we would find chicken soup without the flavorful addition of dill. And how dull and repetitious would be the various fish dishes that grace our tables throughout the months, if it were not for the pungent and somewhat sour properties of this plant.

Cucumbers live up when dill is added to the spices that transform them into pickles. Potatoes perk up nicely when accented with dill, as do such foods as sour cream, yogurt, cottage cheese and salads.

The Scandinavians love dill, and its feathery leaves and flat seed are vital elements in the cuisines of central and eastern Europe.

The word dill is of Saxon origin; dillan, which means to lull. Perhaps this name came about because dill water was often used by mothers to soothe and pacify their crying infants. In herbal medicine, dill is believed capable of ending flatulence and calming the most delicate of digestive systems.

The leaves of the dill plant are referred to as dill weed. It is used in fresh and dried form. The fragrance of dill weed is not only a flavorful addition to potatoes, cucumbers and cauliflower, but its feathery, filigree-like leaves make a most attractive garnish. If you use fresh dill weed, be careful to wash it well, as dirt sticks to the intricate leaves.

Dried dill weed and dill seed are readily available in supermarkets, and the fresh weed also can be found from time to time. This herb should be stored as other herbs are. Fresh dill weed will keep in the refrigerator for several days if sealed in a plastic bag. To keep the dill longer, first wash it, then place it stem side down in a canning jar filled with about one inch of cold water from the tap, trimming the stems if necessary to make it fit inside. Store in the refrigerator, changing the water every three days or so.

If you want to plant your own, remember that dill is an annual and must be planted from seed. It can be planted indoors, or outside in the spring, and needs full sun. The seeds germinate quite quickly, in about 10 days to two weeks. If planted outdoors in the spring, the seeds will form in July.

The fresh leaves should be taken from the plant before the seeds form in the flower heads. When the seeds form, which they do quickly once the flower appears, remove them by cutting the seed heads, and then allow them to dry until they become brown. They will dry well just by being kept in a paper bag.

This sauce works particularly well as a dip for shrimp:

DILL MUSTARD SAUCE

1/2 cup mustard cup sour cream
One-third cup fresh dill, chopped (or 4 teaspoons dried)

Combine all ingredients well. If covered and refrigerated, this sauce will keep for about three days. Makes one cup.

CHICKEN SOUP

3 pounds stewing chicken
1 onion, chopped
1 parsnip, chopped
2 carrots, sliced into 1-inch strips
2 celery stalks, diced
3 sprigs of dill weed
3 sprigs of parsley
Salt, pepper to taste

Cut chicken into quarters, removing as much fat as possible. Place in pot and cover with water. Heat to boiling and simmer for about 15 minutes, skimming off froth. Add onion, parsnip, carrots and celery. The dill and parsley together with white thread and add to pot along with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer for about two hours, checking in the beginning to see if additional skimming is necessary.

Q. Sometimes I just have to fall off my diet. Can you tell me which has fewer calories — a cup of mixed nuts or a cup of chocolate M&M's?

A. The candy. Dry roasted mixed nuts contain 175 calories per ounce, or 1,400 per cupful (8 ounces). Oil-roasted mixed nuts contain 185 calories per ounce, or 1,480 per cupful. The candy, which is milk chocolate, has 140 calories per ounce, or 1,120 per cupful.

Q. I cannot get Cheddar cheese to grate as finely as Romano, but I like the finer grating. The cheese seems to go farther. What am I doing wrong?

A. Nothing, probably. The characteristics of cheese vary. Firm or hard cheeses, such as Romano or Parmesan naturally grate finer. Semisoft or semifirm cheeses, such as Swiss or Cheddar, shred into thin, narrow strips.

You might get the softer cheeses to grate a little finer if you will chill them thoroughly before grating. But the shreds won't be much smaller.

Dear Abby

Family crisis needs care

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my mature 13-year-old son has been molesting my daughters. They are 3 and 6 years old. I think I should have the girls checked by a doctor to make sure they are OK, but I need some information first.

How much do I have to tell the doctor? Does a doctor have to report such cases to the law or the social service people? Would the police or social service people take my son or the girls away from me and put them in a foster home? I don't want to lose any of my children.

I talked to my son and he promised it will never happen again. If my children need counseling, is there free or low-cost counseling available?

I don't feel close enough to anyone I know to ask these questions and I don't trust my mail to be private. Answer, please, in your column. Sign me..

— UTAH MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The welfare of all your children should be your first concern. Take the little girls to a doctor to be examined and tell the doctor the truth. Your son should be examined by a psychiatrist. Take him to your local mental health facility and be honest with the people there.

Please don't worry that your children will be taken from you. You need to put your problem into the hands of professionals. Even though your son has promised it will never happen again, he should be evaluated and counseled. And on the chance that the little girls have been psychologically damaged, they need counseling, too. Please follow this advice and let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old housewife with a 13-month-old baby boy. My problem is I always seem to start an argument with my husband over the slightest little thing. For example:

He has started to grow a beard, knowing I don't like beards. I stupidly asked, "Who are you growing that for?"

Of course he got mad and we had a big fight. Now he's threatened to walk out on me, and I really need him for my sake as well as the baby's. Can you give me some advice on how to keep my big mouth shut?

— STUPID IN ARDMORE, OKLA.
DEAR STUPID: Think twice before you speak. And make sure your brain is engaged before you put your mouth in gear.

DEAR ABBY: Our father died suddenly three months ago. We will be forever grateful to his second wife, "Mary," for making his last 12 years so happy.

Dad and our mother had been happily married for 40 years. When Mother died 14 years ago, Dad bought a double plot and expressed the wish to be laid to rest beside Mother. When Dad died, Mary handled all the funeral arrangements. She hurriedly bought another double plot for Dad and herself, ignoring his wishes to be buried with his first wife.

We, the children, were outraged, but said nothing at the time of Dad's funeral because we didn't want to cause an ugly scene. Also, Mary had been a devoted companion to Dad, and her obvious grief was sincere.

Should we confront Mary and have Dad's remains moved to the plot next to Mother in the spring? Two brothers say, "Wait until after Mary goes, then do it."

What do you say?

— TWO SISTERS
DEAR SISTERS: I vote with your brothers.

Work ethic okayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans hold the work ethic in higher regard now than they did six years ago, a survey shows.

The 1982 study by the American Council of Life Insurance indicates 43 percent agreed that people are just as willing as they have always been to do a full day's work for a full day's pay -- and 33 disagreed.

A similar study in 1976 found 33 percent agreeing and 41 percent disagreeing.

Servicemen

RUPERT — Airman Tina L. Keesler Air Force Base, Miss. Bernad, daughter of Ramon and Betty Bernad of Route 1, Rupert, has graduated from the Air Force administrative specialist course at a 1982 graduate of Minico High School.

If your car has "knock" or "run-on"...

NEW CHEVRON SUPREME UNLEADED is our new solution.

Many of today's cars, even though properly tuned, are having performance problems — "knocking" and "pinging," or "running on" after the engine has been turned off. New Chevron Supreme Unleaded is specially formulated from Chevron's high quality, extensively refined gasoline stocks to help reduce or eliminate these problems.

Knocking and pinging, usually most evident when you're accelerating or climbing a hill, are the result of uneven gasoline combustion in your car's engine. New Chevron Supreme Unleaded promotes smooth, even combustion — a quality which can eliminate knock and ping.

A second problem is the sputtering, clattering noise you sometimes hear after the engine's been shut off, known as "run-on." The properties of Supreme Unleaded work to eliminate this problem, too.

Because Chevron Supreme Unleaded is lead-free, it helps prevent corrosive engine wear and extends the life of your car's spark plugs, muffler and exhaust system. It can save you money.

Is it right for you?

Chevron Supreme Unleaded can help eliminate knock, ping and run-on in a great many of today's cars. However, if you've been using Regular grade or Unleaded gasoline without experiencing these performance problems, we do not recommend switching to Chevron Supreme Unleaded.

The introduction of Supreme Unleaded also means that most customers whose cars have been using Chevron Supreme leaded gasoline can now enjoy all the benefits of using unleaded gasoline.

At Chevron, the choice is yours.

With Chevron Regular, Chevron Unleaded — and now with Chevron Supreme Unleaded — your Chevron dealer has a full range of gasolines designed to meet the needs of virtually all of today's cars. Ask for the grade that is right for you and your car's needs.

With three grades of gasoline to choose from, your Chevron dealer can help you keep your car running efficiently and economically... from fuel choice to tire pressure to tune-ups. Every little contribution to conservation helps a lot.
